AIRMAN'S STORY OF NOBILE'S PLIGHT ON POLAR ICE ISLAND

Today

1884 Leave Harvard Rabbits and Humans Throw Away Ambition Sound in Movies

— By Arthur Brisbane —

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

HARVARD GAVE degrees yesterday to 1384 students. Of four young men attaining highest scholastic standing, taking their bachelor's degree, summa cum laude, two were Jewish boys. That should modify a certain Harvard attitude on one race question.

The French say, "Travel forms youth when it doesn't deform it." The same is true of a college education.

How many of the 1884 young men are abler for having gone to college? How many leave with a keen desire for knowledge, how many with a conviction that they know almost everything?

How many would have been far ahead on the road to success, if they had spent their college years at work?

Charles F. Brush, able citizen, inventor of the arc light, sets aside $500,000 to keep down excess population and improve the race.

Mr. Brush advocates stringent birth control, sterilization of the physically and mentally unfit.

Many think they can improve on Providence and the workings of nature in regard to population.

Nature knows how to get rid of the unfit. The important thing is to have crowds of humans from which to elect exceptional men and women to do the real work.

However, nature's methods change. China, that once drowned the girl babies, now keeps them alive.

Plagues that killed off millions a year are fought by modern science, and population thus increased.

Hunger and plague used to kill off the weak, as war killed off those that were too combative.

If civilization stops wars, and science conquers disease, it may be necessary, artificially, to prevent humans multiplying as the rabbits did in Australia.

Sir James Barrie tells Rhodes scholars not to try for "greatness." The advice was humorous, probably. Trying for greatness produces desirable mediocrity. Men "aim high to shoot low" as the illiterate colored man said when he asked Grover Cleveland to make him librarian of Congress. He really wanted a job as porter.

A baby cries for the moon and is satisfied with a cookie. Youth reaches for greatness and is content with modest achievement and a place on the golf course.

Winfield R. Sheehan, who knows about moving pictures, says screens will be much bigger for large-sized theaters now building everywhere. That will make it necessary to revise production methods.

Most important for budding genius, he says the "talking movie" will create a new army of scenario writers, knowing how to make sound effective in pictures.

In a detective story, noise of a creaking board, or a shot, might be more effective than the hero's smile.

Mr. Sheehan believes that the pictures with sound will double moving picture attendance.

Secretary Work of the Interior Department will conduct Secretary Hoover's presidential campaign. No better man could be chosen.

Like Mr. Hoover, Mr. Work knows this country, understands the work of development that the country needs and is in full sympathy with Secretary Hoover's plans and past accomplishments.

Mr. Hoover is fortunate in having Senator Curtis for a running mate, and doubly fortunate with Secretary Work directing his campaign.

Liquor Fight Faces Democrats

SMITH WILL DECIDE WHETHER PLATFORM SHALL BE MADE 'WET'

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Correspondent

Houston, June 22.—The prohibition issue was uppermost in everybody's mind today.

It was gossiped about and speculated wherever politicians gathered. It figured in every brand of pre-convention speculation.

Only a few arrivals, who [illegible] gates so-called leaders, were the fight over the presidential nomination will be anything but short and snappy. The opinion that Governor Smith will be nominated within three ballots is so universal it is accepted on all sides as a fact, with the possible exception of those who are backing Senator Reed. His managers grimly insist Smith won't be nominated—and won't be.

Governor Smith will make a decision within 24 hours whether his managers are to make a fight at the convention for a plank in the platform calling for modification of the Volstead law or referenda for the states on the liquor issue.

BALL FALTERS IN SECOND ROUND OF OPEN

Chicago, Ill., June 22.—Frank Ball, the British-born professional from Bobby Jones' home club, Eastlake, down in Atlanta, Ga., cracked on the way to the turn this morning, in the second round of the United States open championship, at Olympia Fields, and he was 39-42-81, giving him a 151 for the two rounds.

Ball was on even terms with Henry Cuici, New England's hope at the end of the first day's play, with a 76, but he encountered trouble on the second and third holes today and was 4 over par at the halfway mark.

The Atlanta professional started with a fine "birdie" 4 on the first hole, where was home with his third and ran down a fine putt. Going to the second he was short in up, and then failed to get sufficiently close with his chip to get down with one putt and he took a 5.

The poor approach noticeably affected Ball, but he got off a fine drive from the 3d tee but his second hit a tree and carcened into a trap, from where he came out clean and went over the green. He chipped back on, but took two putts and he was three over par going to the 4th.

FALTERS ON EIGHTH.

Ball went along at par until he reached the 6th, where, after driving the green, he took three putts and a safety shot at the 9th, when

Flying Big Topic for Council

New England has the labor, the factories and the management and can get in on the ground floor of the aviation industry on just as favorable a basis as any other section of the country, A. Lincoln Filene declared today in an address read at the closing session in Hotel Statler of the second New England aviation conference.

Filene, who was indisposed and unable to attend the meeting, is chairman of the research committee of the New England council under whose auspices the conference was held.

A feature of the meeting was the appearance of Congressman Edith Nourse Rogers who flew to Boston from the new Lowell airport. She made a brief speech and following adjournment of the session many of the prominent business leaders in attendance flew from Boston Airport to inspect the new field.

AVIATION INVESTMENT.

Another arrival by air was Richard F. Hoyt. Hoyt with his own pilot and in his own plane flew up from New London, Ct., between the Harvard-Yale boat races in order to speak on "The Investment Aspect of Aviation."

While, he said, he did not feel the term of investment could yet be applied to the field, aviation offered a business venture which had great opportunities. The industry should not be considered on a volume basis which affords the medium of com-

FIRST EYE WITNESS OF NOBILE'S PERIL TELLS OF BEAR LURKING NEAR

The Boston Evening American presents today the first detailed story of Maj. Maddalena's flight to aid the Nobile party marooned in the Arctic. In it Maj. Maddalena tells of a "pathetic cross of rags" erected by the six men marooned on the ice for 26 days, and of the claw marks of polar bears all about the cross. Nobile stood with arms folded and watched the parachutes, begging articles meaning life to the party, descend from the plane, which could not land. This is the first eye-witness story of Nobile's plight.

King's Bay, June 22 (By Wireless)—"It is not quite true," said Maj. Maddalena to your correspondent, "that I did not see Gen. Nobile's red tent. I saw, as a matter of fact, both the red tent and Gen. Nobile himself.

"My radio operator, Marsano, had a little advantage of me insofar as he was first to perceive the tent, but I saw it quite distinctly later. It was adorned with the flags and bunting taken from the control cabin of the Italia. It had been erected

POTATOES 17C PECK IN BOSTON, NEW ONES 25C

With potatoes glutting the Boston market and arriving in large shipments from the South, the price in chain stores has dropped to 17 cents a peck for the old and 25 cents for the new.

Besides large quantities pouring in from the Carolinas, Virginia and other southern states, according to Chairman Charles H. Adams of the state commission on the necessaries of life, the northern crop will begin finding its way to local markets within a few weeks.

A considerable supply was held over from last year and this in great part accounts for the present flooded condition of the market, Chairman Adams explained.

The Maine state department of agriculture announces that more than 2,500,000 bushels of certified potatoes of the three standard varieties, Irish Cobblers, Green Mountains and Spaulding Rose, have been moved out of that state bearing the blue tag of the department.

N. Y. MODEL, MISSING 9 DAYS, HIDING IN HUB

Somewhere in Boston, Helen Troy, 26, artist's model, missing nine days from New York, was in hiding today, according to a message received by a New York friend.

This girl, after long being out of engagements, disappeared from her apartment at 4880 Broadway. The whimpering of her pet poodle dog, of which she was very fond, led neighbors to investigate. They found the dog almost exhausted from starvation.

A. W. Hansen of Isham st., Manhattan, was the recipient of the brief note from the girl. The note said:

"I am in Boston and will be back in a couple of days."

Hansen told police that only serious trouble, in his belief, would move the girl to disappear without first providing for the comfort of her pet poodle.

Miss Troy's attractive face has been reproduced on the covers of many magazines, according to Hansen.

POWER TRUST MADE PUBLIC FOOT BILLS

Washington, June 22—Public utility interests behind the Power lobby in Washington were revealed as piling up profits of millions of dollars manipulating stocks and forcing consumers to foot the bills.

"Insiders" were represented before the Federal Trade Commission as having made "a profit of from $15,000,000 to $14,000,000" in one instance by selling out a small controlling stock interest after boosting a company's valuation and the rates charged patrons.

Promoters of new utility projects were pictured as making 100 to 200 per cent profit, and certain financiers as selling "securities based on blue sky, on hope."

All these disclosures—made by one of the utilities' own men—were in the middle of a block of ice which is slightly concave with a jagged surface.

"The tent is surrounded by mounds of dirty snow on which the six men have been living for the last 26 days. Lieut. Cagna and Mechanic Rampini dropped 12 parcels around the tent while I circled around it as many times.

"Among the articles dropped were some smoke-producing bombs and signal flags which should be of great use in the future should the visibility become worse in the region of Foyn Island.

Sees Pathetic Cross of Rags

"The men we saw pointing to us were waving frantically some rags and one with a small mirror in his hand was concentrating on us beams of sunlight in order to attract our attention. Nearby on a small flat plateau of ice a large cross made of rags had been formed.

"We had such a clear view of the scene that I was able to perceive even the claw marks of a polar bear all around that pathetic cross of rags. I will confess that for a few moments I nearly lost my head.

"A temptation almost stronger than myself almost overpowered me, urging me to land near that tent and throw my arms around Nobile and his companions. I believe if I had been alone I would have done it.

"More than once I came down to within 50 or 60 meters of the ice pack, especially after I had spied Nobile himself standing upright, but leaning slightly against the tent with his head uplifted and his arms folded.

"Only two parachutes were required to drop the more fragile of the articles for the lost men. The rest of the equipment was just dropped on the snow, and we were in time to see the men scrambling after the precious parcels before we had to turn back.

"One cannot be absolutely sure, owing to the terribly elusive effects of the shadows on the ice, but I believe that all of the 12 parcels we dropped were near enough the tent to be picked up easily."

Another Italian Plane to Hunt for Amundsen

Pisa, Italy, June 22 (INS)—Another Dornier-Wahl plane, piloted by Commander Ravassoni, left here at 4:45 a. m. today bound for Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, where it will aid in the search for Capt. Roald Amundsen. Ravassoni was accompanied by two mechanics and a radio operator.

Judge Says Stage People Live In False Paradise

New York, June 22 (AP)—In the opinion of State Supreme Court Justice Tierney many theatrical people live in a false paradise of their own construction, are entirely insensible to what goes on about them and regard themselves as superior beings.

He made the remarks in deferring till fall the alimony suit of Pauline Bush Dwan against Allan Dwan, movie director.

WELL, THE DUCKS SHOULD WORRY!

Just to make it interesting, there will be rain over the week-end, in all propability, Meteorologist Loveland announced today.

It may be that New England has not had enough moisture this spring, or it may be that the climate has changed, but at any rate there are three storms scheduled to converge on these parts Saturday and Sunday. One is centering on Omaha, Neb., the second at Amarillo, Texas, and the third at Doucet, Quebec.

The only ray of sunshine, if such it be, is the prediction that southerly winds Saturday night will eliminate the chill which has blasted the hopes and aspirations of worthy citizens for some days. Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Cloudy with showers tonight and probably Saturday; slightly warmer Saturday; moderate easterly winds shifting to southerly late Saturday.

HARVARD LAW GRAD KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Billings, Mont., June 22—Joseph C. Breckenridge of York Village, Me., who was graduated a few days ago from the Harvard Law School, was fatally injured when his automobile turned over at a sharp curve near here. He was taken to a hospital here, but died of his injuries.

Breckenridge was driving to the Pacific Coast in company with his brother, Charles, on a vacation trip.

HOT MAYORALTY FIGHT FORECAST FOR REVERE

A warm contest for mayor is forecast in Revere this fall, with the intimation by Mayor Walsh that he will not seek re-election. Already names of candidates are being talked around, with every indication there will be no dearth of those who will seek to reign at City Hall.

Prominent among those mentioned is City Treasurer William M. Keevey.

One-Eye Connolly Is Out to Crash the Democratic Gate

Houston, June 22 (INS)—The Democrats can go ahead and hold their convention, because "One-Eye" Connolly, champion gate crasher of them all, is ready for action.

Connolly dropped off a freight to get a little heavy training in the art of gate crashing by bustling his way into the Democratic convention. His big stunt will be to crash the gate at the Olympic meet in Amsterdam, Holland.

"This here convention looks like another Dempsey - Carpentier fight," said "One-Eye." "I got chucked out thirteen times there before I stayed in."

Connolly is a "strong booster for Al Smith."

peditions here has been turned simply toward the missing Amundsen group.

The radio operator of the Nobile base ship, Citta di Milano, has been busy trying to find some trace of the huge French plane in which Amundsen and five companions took off from Norway Monday night, but thus far the search has been fruitless.

HEARS FROM ICE SHIPS.

The Citta di Milano has communicated with the ice-cutter Braganza, now off North Cape, and with the Russian icebreaker Maligin, which is near South Cape in a rough sea slowly making her way northward in an effort to break through to Nobile. Neither of these ships had anything to report concerning Amundsen.

The Maligin is laying her course for Cape Leigh Smith, and it is hoped will be able to reach the stranded Nobile group.

Lieut. Luetzow Holm and Capt. Riiser-Larsen, the Norwegian fliers who have made numerous air reconnaissances over the Nobile party, again flew to the vicinity, but were unable to see the men. The Nobile party wirelessed that it had sighted the pilots.

It is regarded as evidently difficult, if not impossible, to strike Nobile's position exactly without wireless guidance. Neither of the Norwegian planes is equipped with radio, and even in the case of Maj. Maddalena, who found the Nobile party on Wednesday, it was difficult for him with his excellent radio equipment to locate the marooned men.

TO DROP NEW RADIO PARTS.

When Maddalena dropped the supplies Wednesday only one of the parachutes to which the packages were attached failed to open. This unfortunately contained fresh batteries and an accumulator for the radio outfit, whose strength Nobile has been carefully husbanding.

Maddalena now plans to drop a new set carefully packed in a rubber boat so that it will not be damaged in falling on the ice.

With the appearance of some sunshine today burning up the fog, Maddalena hoped to be able to make another trip before the day ended and his fellow Italian flier, Maj. Penzo, was planning to get away also if possible. Penzo also has a Dornier-Wal seaplane and is planning to keep a sharp lookout for the Amundsen party.

Commander Romagna of the Citta di Milano told the correspondent for the Associated Press today that he had the greatest hope for the safety of the three men originally of the Nobile party who started overland May 30 in an effort to bring help.

These were Dr. Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist; Capt. Alberto Mariano and Capt. Filippo Zappi.

He pointed out that all were strong men, that Zappi was a good navigator and that Dr. Malmgren was acquainted with conditions through his eight years of experience in the ice fields with Amundsen.

3 MURDERERS EXECUTED IN NATION'S CAPITAL

Washington, June 22 (INS)—Three men were electrocuted in the district jail today for the murder of Patrolman Leo W. K. Busch. Nicholas Lee Eagles, 32, a New York gunman, went to the chair first. Samuel Moreno, 26, of Washington, followed calmly, smoking a cigarette. John C. Proctor, 19, of Baltimore, who collapsed last night, was the third man executed. President Coolidge refused to intercede.

MISS EARHART TAKES TRIP THROUGH LONDON SLUMS

London, June 23—Miss Amelia Earhart, who halted her social work temporarily to fly the Atlantic, returned to it this morning, visiting Toynbee Hall, one of the largest settlement houses in London, she declaimed:

"There is no place like home."

After enjoying several days with London society the Boston girl went to the other extreme and spent several hours among the lowliest in the city.

Miss Earhart went to the slums in the East End of London after laying a wreath on the Cenotaph in memory of Great Britain's warrior dead. Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon, who flew with her in the Friendship, assisted her in placing the wreath, which was inscribed with the names of the fliers. Later she attended the society races at Ascot.

CHEERED BY CHILDREN.

At Toynbee Hall Miss Earhart was received by hundreds of wildly cheering youngsters, many of them waving American flags.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts formed a long row of honor down which Miss Earhart walked to the main door of the building. J. St. C. Catchpool, sub-warden of the hall, met her and escorted her through the various departments.

Miss Earhart showed herself mistress of the details of social work. Shortly after the inspection began she hit upon the essential difference between Toynbee Hall and Denison House in Boston, where she learned social service work.

"You are fortunate," she said, "in dealing with people who understand your languags. In Boston we have the difficulty of dealing with a dozen different languages."

Mr. Catchpool agreed with her. Miss Earhart was shown the British method of dealing with pensions, insurance, unemployment and similar matters.

"I should like to spend several days here instead of several hours," she said. "We have each of us something to learn from the other."

Miss Earhart was presented to several of the younger charges and talked briefly to them.

"You got good material to work with," she said later. "You should be able to do a good deal with those youngsters."

The American girl next met Miss Elizabeth Giles, 81 years old, the oldest person in Whitechapel.

"I thank the Lord that He brought you to us safely," said Miss Giles.

AT CAVELL STATUE

On leaving Miss Earhart signed the visitors' book, a new full page being reserved for her.

Miss Earhart wore a dark blue frock and a close-fitting black hat. Her modish outfit and the top hat and morning coat of Capt. H. H. Bailey, British manager of the flight, made the East End's eyes pop.

After the visit to Toynbee Hall the Earhart party went to the statue of Nurse Edith Cavill, near Leicester sq., where the American girl placed a wreath. This was the tribute of one nurse to another, since Miss Earhart was a nurse in a Toronto Hospital during the war.

parison in the automobile field, he stated.

In the absence of Chairman Filene, E. A. Deeds, director of the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co., Hartford, Ct., presided at the conference. Deeds is one of the pioneer plane manufacturers in the country. He has been flying with the same pilot for 15 years.

STRESSES NEED OF AIRPORTS

The greatest contribution the public can make to aviation is the establishment of airports all over the country, Deeds told the assembled delegates.

"The speed of development of the industry from now on will be pretty much in proportion to the rapidity with which these fields are established," he said. "As roads made the automobile industry so airports will make the aircraft industry.

"Civil aviation is suffering from stunt flying and poor equipment, incompetent pilots, few landing fields and a lack of understanding of the limitations necessary to make flying safe. As business men we have in the past been diverted by these things. Today aviation needs us and the things which our industrial and business experience can bring to it.

"Aviation is going to continue its growth in spite of everything and finally become one of the great industries of the country."

Rain Keeps Los Angeles From Lowell Airport

Lowell, June 22—Rain again today prevented the dirigible Los Angeles from appearing at the municipal field during the new hours and likewise resulted in the curtailment of the second day's stunt and exhibition flying.

A large crowd braved the inclement weather and made the best of it. If the low pressure area clears the navy dirigible will arrive here tomorrow Lieut.-Comdr. Charles E. Rosendahl promised by telegram.

First of the day's activities on the new field was the departure of Capt. Emilio Carranza, the Mexican goodwill flier, accompanied by two army planes Capt. Carranza took off in his Ryan monoplane for Mitchel Field, N. Y., arriving there safely two hours later, according to word received here.

POSTMASTERS END CONVENTION TODAY

Worcester, June 22—Adoption of several resolutions, words of welcome spoken by Mayor O'Hara and Postmaster James F. Healy, and a report of the national convention featured the opening session of the 23d annual meeting of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island branches of the National League of District Postmasters at the Kenmore Hotel.

There were 45 postmasters present. The sessions will be brought to a close today with the election of officers. The organization adopted a resolution that it believed in Civil Service for third-class postmasters.

June 22—A banquet will be tendered Secretary Hoover by the officials and employes of the Commerce Department. The affair may furnish the presidential nominee his first opportunity to speak in public since the convention. 11 GUILTY IN HUB RUM SHIP CONSPIRACY

Eleven New York men in Federal District Court today pleaded guilty to conspiracy to smuggle liquor in connection with the seizure of the steamship Cretan at Battery wharf in July of 1926, and were fined by Judge John Peters.

At the time of the seizure the government officials declared they found Belgian alcohol valued at $1,000,000 concealed under the cargo of waste paper carried by the Cretan.

Sam Bernstein, alleged head of the ring, was fined $1000, and his assistant, Sam Kaplan, $500. William Stern and John M. Anderson, executive officers of the Cretan, were fined $100 each, and the following members of the crew $25: Chris Warner, Charles Marino, William Tatten, Gus Jurgensen, Frank Teasen and John Ffingst.

Warner Orders Inquiry in Warren Acquittal

Members of the Suffolk County jury that acquitted Francis Edgar Stanley Warren, wealthy Back Bay youth, of manslaughter and other automobile charges may be summoned to the State House, together with young Warren himself, for questioning by attaches of the office of Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner.

Warren was found not guilty of causing the death of Miss Margaret Duches of Commonwealth ave., Back Bay, last February 8.

The attorney-general, whose announcement of an intention to investigate caused as much stir as the verdict, launched his probe by assigning Inspector John Mitchell to inquire into certain aspects of the case and by going himself to the Suffolk County courthouse for a conference with Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert E. McGuire, who prosecuted Warren.

CONFERS WITH PROSECUTOR

Full co-operation was promised Atty.-Gen. Warner both by McGuire and Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frederick T. Doyle.

The conference between Warner and McGuire lasted an hour. After it was over, while both parties refused to discuss details of their talk, McGuire made the following statement:

"I offered the aid and assistance of the district attorney's office in thoroughly investigating in a proper way any information that comes in in connection with any obstruction of justice.

Assistant District Attorney Doyle said:

"I was in communication with Attorney-General Warner and offered him our hearty co-operation in this and any other matter. I told him that no facts have been presented to the district attorney's office regarding obstruction of justice in this case, but that he would find this office ready and willing to assist him.

"Not a single fact has been brought to us about any wrongdoing in connection with the handling of this case. If anything comes in here it will be thoroughly investigated and the Attorney-General immediately notified, no matter whom it concerns."

WARNER'S STATEMENT.

Atty-Gen. Warner's statement regarding the case was:

"I deem it my duty to the public to investigate a report that came to me concerning the Warren case, as to whether or not there was any foundation for these rumors reported to me,

"There may nothing develop from this investigation of the rumors reported to me, but their nature is suc hthat my duty compels me toquire into them."

Warren is the son of Mrs. Prescott Warren, bridge whist expert and member of one of the Commonwealth's oldest families. He was acquitted of charges of manslaughter and driving to endanger, but found guilty of operating a car without a license. Judge Quinn placed the last charge on file.

GOODWIN IS QUOTED

Judge Quinn said today that at no time was anything reported to him regarding any alleged wrongdoing among members of the jury or others connected with the case.

It was said that while Frank A. Goodwin was registrar of motor vehicles he warned officials of reports of alleged attempts to "hush" the case.

Miss Duches was a maid employed in the home of Atty. Robert G. Dodge. She was on her way home when struck by an automobile.

WAR VET, DENIED MORE PENSION, FIRES AT JUDGE

Paris, June 22 (AP)—Jules Noel, wounded war veteran, fired five revolver shots at Judge Bonfils in the courtroom today after the court had ruled against his demand for an increased pension. When Noel was asked if he had anything further to say after the judgment had been rendered, he drew his revolver and fired.

All the bullets missed the judge, imbedding themselves in the wall a few inches apart above the judge's head. The spectators stampeded during the firing and the court was thrown into an uproar.

BELGRADE LIKE ARMED CAMP AFTER RIOTS

Vienna, June 22 (AP)—All telephone communication between Vienna and Belgrade has ceased, giving rise to much anxiety here concerning the situation in Jugoslavia.

Belgrade, June 22 (AP)—Jugoslavia is seething with excitement. The riots at Zagreb, Croatia, stronghold of the peasants, which followed the slaying of two Croatian deputies and four others in the Jugoslav Parliament at Belgrade proved even more serious than at first thought. Four persons were killed, six are believed to be dying and nearly 100 were wounded.

Public indignation, which had been smoldering over the policy of the government, has reached fever heat. Belgrade and Zagreb resemble besieged cities, with military forces everywhere.

The removal of the bodies of the two assassinated deputies, Paul Radich and Dr. Basarichek, to Zagreb brought together crowds of angry peasants along the funeral route; they were kept under restraint by the military.

The government newspaper Edinstrovi declared today that stormy times are ahead for Jugoslavia. The severest censorship is being applied to all telephone and telegraph lines. Newspapers appear with blank spaces.

The opposition newspapers are savage in denunciation of the great tragedy. They charge that the murders were not accidental, but deliberately planned to exterminate the government's chief opponents.

COURT PUZZLE ON ALIMONY QUESTION

Whether a Massachusetts court has jurisdiction to order alimony payments from a husband residing outside the state was a problem presented to Judge Harris in Middlesex Probate Court today.

Counsel for Dr. Peter J. Gorman, formerly of Framingham but now claiming residence in New York where he is a public health physician, argued for the vacating and dismissing of a temporary alimony decree handed down on December 22, 1926.

Under this decree, Dr. Gorman was ordered to pay his wife, Mrs. Mildred H. Stone Gorman, now employed in the social service department of a mill at Manchester, N. H., the sum of $50 a week as temporary alimony.

Mrs. Gorman filed suit for divorce in October, 1926, charging cruel and abusive treatment. The suit has never been heard, however.

Dr. Gorman's suit is brought in an attempt to vacate the alimony decree.

Counsel for the wife argued that the physician's legal residence is still in Framingham and that the Middlesex court therefore has jurisdiction.

Judge Harris took the case under advisement.

CITY BRIDAL FOR MISS THAYER—BETTY ALDEN

Nancy Patten and Mrs. Bayard Thayer
Boston Evening American Staff Photo

THE LITTLE BIRD WHO TWITTERS of this and that is already cocking a bright eye toward the autumn and its important nuptials. His twitterings of beautiful Miss Mabel Bayard Thayer are interesting. And indicate that this very lovely youngest daughter of Mrs. Bayard Thayer is to have a big wedding, right here in town, and not miles and miles away in the country, as her two sisters chose to be wed. A town wedding for Miss Thayer and Richard Storey, Jr., with its ecclesiastical pomp and hundreds of superlatively important guests, is exactly to the smart set's liking.

THEY, THE UPPER CRUSTY ones, will on occasion motor many a dusty country mile when super important nuptials demand so long a journey. Both sentiment and family tradition had much to do with placing two Thayer weddings miles from town. The former Miss Constance Thayer became Mrs. William Dexter in the little Colonial church that sits on the village green at Lancaster. And Mrs. Gerry Greene assumed that cognomen, as she relinquished that of Thayer, in Groton school chapel.

TINY EDIFICES, BOTH Groton Chapel is associated with Mr. Greene's scholastic background, and little Christ Church in Lancaster is inextricably wound into Thayer family history so closely associated is that with the pretty town of Lancaster. Miss Mabel Thayer's fancy for a big wedding in town will delightfully vary family procedure, and give the crowds who love to gape at brides outside church doors a rare treat. A beauty is Miss Thayer, so they all agree. Her wedding bells will peal late in September.

THE WEST OF HIGH SIERRAS, ranches, national parks and nimble-footed ponies following the trails is Miss Anne Wentworth's abiding place for several weeks. This attractive prospective bride is living a strenuous out-of-door existence, and finding it exactly a perfect prelude to strenuous pre-nuptial days of fittings, gift acknowledging, card-sending and home preparing that beset pleasantly every bride's afterward pain. Miss Wentworth's wedding day already is on the autumn calendar, and she will be one of the season's most stunning brides.

NOT YET HAS NEWPORT burst into the season's full and riotous bloom. Of an afternoon Bellevue ave.'s leafy quiet is broken by the honk of the motor horn, to be sure. But it is the motoring sightseer, the outlander from afar, doing the sights, rather than the millionaire colonist, who rolls down the smooth lengths of the much-paragraphed avenue. Such colonists as are already in residence at the social stronghold do the accepted Newport things. Tennis at the Casino is one.

MISS LOUISE FESSENDEN OF Chestnut Hill was a smart and pretty Bostonian recently staying the week-end in Newport. She was house guest at Dudley Place, the Newport establishment of the Frederic Cameron Churches, Jr. Miss Fessenden's name appeared in the Casino register, that record of visiting celebrities and social top notchers who move through the bright pattern of Newport's days. Young Mr. George Weld also week-ended in Newport, and appeared in the Casino register as house guest of young Mr. Kenneth Rudd.

DUDLEY PLACE, THE CHURCH establishment at Mile-End, has a cheerily hospitable atmosphere entirely lacking in certain of Newport's stone chateaux or turreted Victorian mansions. No pretentious gardens surround the house, which is the Southern Colonial with pillared verandahs and wide chimneys denoting deep fireplaces. Dudley Place is rich in wide-sweeping lawns, on which Mrs. Church delights to exercise her harness horses, a task to which she devotes many hours of every day she is in Newport.

IN HER TASTE FOR FINE horseflesh this daughter of the Vanderbilts runs true to inheritance. And in a day and age favoring the timber-topping hunters and fleet-footed thoroughbreds, Mrs. Church's love for handsome harness horses is something to delight the heart of the old-timers. By no means the dilettante is Mrs. Church; very wisely and slowly is she adding to the Church string. Expert advice and judgment is here for the asking; and allied to her own keen personal knowledge they indicate that some very choice specimens of horse-flesh will abide in the Church stables.

She Takes the Palm in Mad Dance Marathon

New York, June 22 (INS)—Back on the main floor of Madison Sq. Garden, the marathon dancers of Milton D. Crandall shuffled into the 276th hour of their $5000 contest today.

Thirteen couples were left in the struggle after dancing 12 days.

Some excitement prevailed when Hannah Karpman, Brooklyn physical culture teacher, pusher her partner, Gunnar Neilson, C. C. Pyle bunioneer, from her and seized a potted palm with which she pirouetted about the floor. Trainers rushed out and took the palm from her, restoring the embarrassed and somewhat non-plussed Neilson to her frantic embrace and steering the pair off on the old steps.

"I guess it's from lack of sleep. I've been a little dopey since yesterday," Hannah explained.

The Austin Club of Boston has been elected a new active member and the Frothingham Club of Boston is now an honorary member.

GIRL, 16, TAKES POISON; MAN IS SOUGHT

Moaning and partly conscious, a girl who gave her name as Eloise Branzer, 16, and an address on Madison ave., Newton, was found by the police today on the front stairway in the dwelling at 129 Austin st., in the rear of Central sq., Cambridge, early today.

According to the police the girl attempted suicide by drinking a mixture of iodine and sulpho-naphol. She was taken in the police ambulance to the Municipal Hospital. There restoratives were administered by Dr. Benjamin Cohen.

The girl, according to the police, was left in the hallway by a man who gave his name to an occupant of the house as Francis O'Brien of Pearl st., Watertown, and then disappeared. The police, according to a report filed at headquarters, were unable to locate any such man at the Pearl st (Watertown) address.

That the girl isn't dead is due to the efforts of Patrolmen Edward Dwyer and Robert Culhane of the Central sq. station in administering first aid treatment when they found her.

NURSES TO SEE COPLEY SHOW

Next Monday night 40 graduate nurses of the Boston City Hospital will attend the performance of "He Walked in Her Sleep," Norman Cannon's hilarious farce at the Copley Theater, as guests of the Boston Evening American.

The nurses have plenty of laughs coming to them as the show which R. E. Clive is presenting to Boston playgoers, prior to its New York production, is the season's best laughing success.

The cast includes the author in the part of a droll butler, Ralph Roberts as Sir Andrew, Winifred Kingston as Lady Tankerton, Cecile Dixon as the pretty and captivating daughter, May Edliss and Charles Courtneidge. The play is in three acts.

SIX-TON GIRL ARRIVES IN BOSTON

"Paulina"—a big girl for her age—made her first Boston appearance today, the bulwark of a record shipload of animals that reached Hoosac docks aboard the Yankee Line freighter Natirar from Hamburg.

Paulina is a six-ton elephant, pride of the monsters of her species that hail from India. She is consigned to the new municipal zoo at Detroit, and there lies a problem that puzzled men of transportation today.

In a huge crate, built of two-inch plank, each a foot in width and firmly bound with heavy iron bands, the huge animal was hoisted over the port side of the ship onto a strong lighter. A trip around the side of the dock and another hoist placed her in position for entraining.

SHE'S BIG PROBLEM

A problem in bridge clearances was met by B. & M. railroad officials, shipping agents and John T. Benson of Nashua, N. H., representative of Hagenbach Bros., through whom the animals are shipped.

A "hilly-possum" freight car, used by one American circus, may have to be secured before the animal may be transported.

Among the other animals destined for the new Detroit zoo were Paulina's daughter of a half-ton weight, six zebras, 16 antelopes, six Ausdads, a species of mountain goat; eight ostriches, 12 polar bears, eight roaring lions, six brown bears, four camels and two guanacos, the latter a variety of llamas that inhabit the Andes.

FOR DETROIT ZOO

Park Commissioner "Square Deal" Miller of the Detroit commission and Dr. Ewalt, Detroit veterinarian, inspected the animals when the ship docked. Both are interested in the new zoological park that is planned with natural surroundings after the famous Hagenbach's at Hamburg.

Baron Siegfried von Reiwitz was in charge of the large shipment during the trip, using three assistants in the cars and feeding. One antelope was lost, he having suffered a broken neck when he caught in his cage.

The animals and birds, other than the Detroit consignment, were sent to Nashua for a quarantine period.

EVERYBODY TALKS LESLEY'S WOMEN'S APPAREL FOR LESS

Wild West Stars Buy $10,000 Policies

Something happened right in the heart of Boston and Boston's heart is still glowing with a wholesome sort of a tingle as a result of it.

Staid, elderly business men could be seen, minus all their dignity, lining the curb of Washington and Summer sts. and Winthrop sq. and waving their hats and "whoopee."

Newsboys forgot their papers and capered along the street in wild exultation.

"Ride 'em cowboy, cowgirl and Injun," they yelled, "ride 'em." The shrill cheers of women and girls mingled with the hubbub.

Horses are unusual enough in downtown Boston. But when Chief Cowboy Browning, his beautiful wife, and Big Chief Walk-Under-the-Ground, a full-blooded Sioux, all of the 101 Ranch and Wild West show, now exhibiting at Andrew sq., South Boston, and their three handsome horses, galloped into the heart of busy Boston, it created something of a near riot.

Up Summer st. they trotted and galloped with all the breeziness of the west and forming a picture that Boston will never forget. Into Devonshire st. and to the office of the Boston Evening American at 2 Winthrop sq. galloped the trio.

Right up to the entrance they clattered. At the steps they didn't even hesitate. Up they went. Hoofs beat a lively tattoo on the concrete and marble. Right through the hallway the picturesque trio rode and into the insurance department of the Boston Evening American to the popeyed amazement of some 25 clerks busily filling applications for the Boston Evening American's $10,000 accident insurance policy distributed to the people of New England at $1 a year.

"What you want, cowboy, want?" a girl clerk asked as one of the 101 Ranch show horses nibbled at the flowers pinned on her dress.

"We want three of these very $10,000 accident insurance policies that the Boston Evening American is distributing at $1 a year," Cowgirl Browning and her husband, Chief Cowboy Browning, said, with a real western smile, while Chief Walk-Under-the-Ground exclaimed: "Insurance policy heap good medicine—chief want one, too."

It was all over in a few minutes at the Boston Evening American office. But oh, what a jam when the trio of riders from the 101 Ranch show reached the traffic tower at Summer and Washington sts.

"Whoopee," yelled the Brownings and the chief, as they galloped up close to the tower. "See what we've got," declared Cowgirl Browning to the officer in the traffic tower and, incidentally shooting a smile that made the officer blush. "See—a Boston Evening American $10,059 accident policy for $1."

"Me, too," shouted Cowboy Browning holding aloft so that the officer could see his precious bit of paper representing $10,000 worth of protection.

"Me got 'em, too," chuckled Chief Walk-Under-the-Ground. "Boston Evening American insurance good for pale face—heap good medicine for Injun too!"

And then they whirled and clattered off back to the 101 Ranch and Wild West show at Andrew sq., South Boston.

Peking, June 22 (AP)—Roy Chapman Andrews, who is searching in Mongolia for traces of the early ancestors of man, has sent this telegram to the Associated Press from Urdlen: "The expedition already is highly successful. Extraordinary fossil animals and abundant remains of primitive human cultures discovered. Mongolia is peaceful."

Strikers Use Brooms, but Police Make a Sweep

New Bedford, June 22 (AP)—Four mill gate pickets were arrested today after a clash between textile strikers and police in which police allege the strikers wielded broom handles.

Two women arrested last night outside the Wamsutta Mill were also in district court today.

Today's disturbance was at the Nonquit Mill, when automobiles, said by the pickets to be carrying operatives to work, ran into the mill.

Wins Success

EAST BOSTON BOY

Johnny Pueblo, last year's winner in the Boston Evening American's harmonica contest, is making a name for himself on the West Coast.

Come on Gang! Get into this Harmonica Contest that the Boston Evening American is conducting in conjunction with the appearance of Borrah Minevitch at the Metropolitan Theater, where the former Hub newsie is playing a week's engagement.

Remember, gang, there is no red tape attached to this contest, and every boy between the ages of 10 and 13 is eligible to compete for a place in Borrah Minevitch's famed harmonica band.

Johnny Pueleo of East Boston, last year's winner, started with Borrah a year ago, and it was during Minevitch's engagement on the west coast that Paramount Pictures offered to buy his contract, and it is predicted by leaders in the profession that little Johnny will soon be one of the headliners in the profession.

All you must do is send your entry to Borrah Minevitch, care of the Metropolitan Theater, and then watch this paper for further developments, as to eliminations, which will be held at the theater during Borrah Minevitch's stay.

Palmer, consisting of 23 acres, large dwelling, and combination dwelling, garage and stable, and formerly owned by Capt. B. M. Church.

The Sisters of the Sacred Hearts will use the estate for a summer school and camp and rest house with the possibility that it may be used later for a girls' school and college.

"PROSPECT" BEATS AND ROBS AUTO SALESMAN

Concord, N. H., June 22—A stranger for whom John Crosby, a Concord automobile agent, was demonstrating a car robbed Crosby of the car, his watch and money and left the agent senseless by the roadside. The police of Concord and other New Hampshire cities and towns were searching tonight for the stolen car.

Crosby drove from Concord in the direction of Hopkinton and when near the latter town his passenger produced a pistol, robbed the agent, beat him over the head and threw him into the ditch.

ESCAPES FROM PRISON CAMP AT RUTLAND

Amedo J. Casey, 46, a prisoner at the Rutland camp of the State prison, escaped today, according to an alarm flashed to Boston police and other cities.

Thrice Wed to Same Man; Would Annul All 3 Marriages

New York, June 22 (AP)—Florence Goodman Isaacs, 22, wishes the courts to annul her three marriages. They all were to the same man.

There was an elopement. Her parents insisted on a religious ceremony. Then at her husband's demand that the tieing be done right ceremony No. 3 was performed by the mayor of Bergen, N. J.

Now, she avers, she has learned her husband was divorced and forbidden to remarry.

LET ALL BOOST THE PACIFIC FLIERS' FUND

"In the spirit of Americanism, let us boost the fund for the Americans that flew the Pacific."

This, in substance, is the cry to day in praise of the Hearst fund for Harry W. Lyon and James Warner, navigator and radio operator of the Southern Cross, who accomplished the seemingly impossible in spanning water and land from California to Australia.

Their companions received recognition from the Australian government to the extent of $25,000. A grateful government rewarded her heroes.

You can show your spirit of Americanism by jumping into the race that is sending the fund over the top. The Flight Editor, Boston Evening American, will handle your contribution.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG TO APPEAR AT OLYMPIA

Clara Kimball Young, one of the screen's first leading stars, will appear personally at the Washington St. Olympia Theater during next week.

Clara K. Young.

For the past few years Miss Young has given her time to the spoken stage. She created an enviable reputation for herself in the films but she was equally well known in the drama before motion pictures became popular.

In her new vaudeville act she presents an intimate song and story divertissement called "Words and Music." She has a flair for the singing of descriptive songs, and her ability as a comedienne has been no small part of her many successful seasons both on stage and screen.

American Insists 'Words of Hate' Adorn Library

Louvain, Belgium, June 22 (AP)—Controversy over whether the new Louvain Library should bear the Latin inscription, "Destroyed by German Fury. Restored by American Generosity," broke out afresh today resulting in suspension of work upon the structure.

The inscription, under present plans, is to be placed upon a balcony in the completed edifice, but Mgr. P. Ladeuze, rector of the university, has been opposed to this as reviving war hatreds, and another balcony without an inscription was ordered constructed by him and to be placed instead.

Whitney Warren, American architect, who has insisted upon the original inscription which was agreed upon by the late Cardinal Mercier, has been in Paris, but appeared unexpectedly in Louvain today just as the Ladeuze balcony was about to be placed.

When informed by the contractors of the rector's instructions, the architect indignantly declared that he would not allow the erection of the other balcony as "sabotage" of his work.

LIQUOR STORM LOOMS OVER DEMOCRATS

Norman Mack, the veteran New York national committeeman, raised the issue by his bald statement that Smith was and is in favor of allowing each state to make its own interpretation of the dry laws. And Smith added to it by reasserting at Albany his belief that the present Volstead law should be amended. The Governor said, in effect, that the fact he was a candidate for the White House had not operated to change his mind on this point in the slightest.

The Governor's statement was a red flag to the radical and professional drys who are now gathering here in force to prevent, if possible, the nomination of a "wet candidate."

The Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U. and their kindred organizations laid down a veritable barrage of statements today, warning the incoming delegates that "the nomination of Smith or any other wet" means dire things next November.

MAY REAFFIRM OLD PLANK.

Despite the avalanche of statements and threats on both sides, it appeared wholly likely today that the platform which is to be adopted next week simply will reaffirm the plank of 1924, which pledged the party to rigorous enforcement and respect for all laws. Such is the advice of even those temperate drys, like Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who already is looking beyond Houston and toward November.

Senator Harrison does not believe it is necessary for the Democrats to single out one law, the Volstead law, for example, and pledge it undying support and allegiance.

DRYS FULL OF FIGHT.

"If that law is to be singled out for specific support and observance, Senator Harrison observed, then there is no reason why the convention should not go down the line for other laws about which there is controversy.

"The Democratic Party," said Senator Harrison, whose opinion reflects that of other southern leaders who are more or less resigned to Smith's nomination, "stands for law enforcement. That includes the dry laws, of course. And that is enough."

The militant drys, however, will not content themselves with this view of it. What they want—and what they intend to fight for—is a plank that goes at least as far as the Republican platform in naming the 18th amendment. They will be satisfied with nothing less and they are going to demand a good deal more in the resolutions committee.

Reed Backers Cheered by Smith's Wet Views

Houston, Tex., June 22 (INS)—A wave of optimism swept through the presidential headquarters of Sen. James Reed today. Reed's lieutenants predicted Smith would be eliminated because of his "radical wet views" and that with the New York governor stopped, the Missouri senator would be an easy victor. They declared Smith would be stopped because the Democratic party could not nominate a candidate who stood for amendment of the prohibition law.

Reed will arrive on the scene of battle this evening. A year ago he helped to defeat a wet referendum in Missouri. He declared the time was not ripe for a referendum on prohibition. He has been looked upon as a wet because he opposed adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

F. J. Prince, of the Reed camp, declared Smith's maximum strength would be 660 votes, while 734 is necessary for his nomination.

Farm Relief Crusaders Besieging the Democrats

Houston, Tex., June 22 (INS)—Crusaders in the cause of farm relief, here to lay their orphan child on the doorstep of the Democratic national convention, today predicted its adoption and a rapid bloom into full maturity after the November election.

Every incoming Democratic leader of note and every delegate is being approached.

"We believe we are going to get what we want," said George N. Peek of Chicago, representing the committee of 22 and speaking for the Farm Bureau Federation.

There will be no farmers' march on Houston, and none of the blare of farmers' bands which sounded a menacing note at the height of the Republican meeting.

Mercury Soars With Democratic Hopes

By ELIAS A. McQUAID

HOUSTON, Tex., June 22—Early arrivals in Houston from points north and northeast may have thought they knew what hot weather is, but they "hadn't been anywhere, nor seen nothing."

Houston is informing them, as the following thermometer readings may suggest:

6 a. m.	77	11 a. m.	88
7 a. m.	81	12 noon	89
8 a. m.	83	1 p. m.	91
9 a. m.	85	2 p. m.	92
10 a. m.	86	3 p. m.	93

These were the marks, as revealed by the Houston meteorologist of the United States weather bureau.

Down on the city streets the figures would naturally be a few degrees higher. The minimum figure recorded in the night was 76. Bellboys hustling night and day with ice or ginger ale will spend all their tips for new shoes.

It won't be long now before the curtain goes up and we see at least the one-act play which precedes the main performance. Senator Reed will get in from Kansas City tonight. His headquarters are at one end of the Rice's mezzanine floor, the Smith bureau at the other.

The Smith people arrived with as much baggage as a prosperous "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company would carry. From two or three big boxes "Joe" Cohn, one of the troupe, has taken the Smith lithographs which already hang from the Smith side of the mezzanine railing.

Other boxes contain Smith literature, ready to be shipped from Houston to various parts of the country as delegates to the convention may request. From the Tammany point of view it is plainly all over but the shouting.

* * *

George L. Berry of Tennessee, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union, arrived and opened headquarters in the Chronicle Building. George is a candidate for the nomination for Vice-President, as he was four years ago in Madison Square Garden.

A great secret is locked within the breast of the distinguished gentleman who is sleeping late today in Room 922 at the Rice. His name is "Pat" Harrison, and he is one of the senators from Mississippi.

There are rumors abroad that Senator "Pat" plans to swing the Mississippi delegation into the Smith column at the earliest moment possible, but he is not talking—at least about this rumor. In Madison Square Garden, four years ago, the gentleman from Mississippi delivered the "Keynote" speech.

Governor Smith's friends are saying that out of the 1100 votes in the convention, he will receive at least 850 on the first ballot. Some figure that Maryland's 16 may bring his total close to the 700 mark. He needs 733 1-3.

Ohio and Nebraska are expected to "break" to him on the second and Tom Taggart's 30 from Indiana at the same time or shortly afterwards. Most of which is denied and right stoutly by the "Jim" Reed advance guard.

Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, New York's veteran member of the Democratic national committee, appears today to be reluctant to discuss even the weather with old friends among the reporters. Upon his arrival here, the Buffalo publisher made a statement in which he set forth Governor Smith's views on the prohibition question, saying that the governor believes in state's rights and holds that each state should be permitted to handle the liquor question in its own way.

If this is not what Governor Smith believes, a lot of us have been deceived, but poor Mack, who is at least on the edge of three score years and ten and may be attending his last big show, appears to have spoken out of his turn.

His statement was immediately denied, disowned, disavowed and most politely denounced by George Van Namee, "Al's" personal representative, who wants the world to know that only the Governor is authorized to say what the Governor believes about anything.

If Van Namee or any other man thinks it is possible to win the temperance folk to the Smith candidacy he might as well know now that there isn't the ghost of a show. In Travis street around the corner from the Rice, I visited the campaign headquarters of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, where Editor Mollie Davis Nicholson of Chevy Chase, Maryland, presented me with a bitterly anti-Smith copy of "The Woman Voter," her own publication, and declared that nothing the Governor of New York can say or do will win "The Women."

"Is the country to be turned over to Tammany?" The Woman Voter for June asks in its headlines. "No, say 30,000,000 women, make America safe for our children.

Among the signs on the walls of the W. C. T. U. store are "Use your head—not headlines," "Sparkling water we will drink" and "The nineteenth amendment comes to the aid of the eighteenth amendment."

* * *

Maine and Massachusetts delegates, with some of the New Hampshire folk, are expected to arrive on the Southern Pacific's "Solid Smith Special," at 7:30 Monday morning.

SMITH'S PICTURE CUT OUT OF "DRY" MOVIES

New York, June 22 (AP)—The picture of Governor Smith in the prohibition film, "Deliverance," which his friends said placed him in an unfavorable light, is to be deleted.

Officials of the Stanley Advertising Company, who are making the film for Robert E. Corradini, research secretary of the World League Against Alcohol, said it would be delivered without the flash of the Governor. The film is a pictorial dramatization of two books on prohibition by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale.

FRANCES WHITE SUES TO DIVORCE DONNELLY

Chicago, June 22 (AP)—Frances White, musical comedy star who has given the musical spelling of "O-H-I-O" from many American stages, has filed suit to divorce Clinton T. Donnelly, New York business man. She charges desertion. They were married in 1923 after Donnelly had been divorced by Mrs. Hazel Reba Donnelly, New York modiste, who named Miss White in her suit. In her bill Miss White said she and Donnelly have been living apart for two years.

SHIFT HUNT FOR NAVY PRISONERS TO VERMONT

Dover, N. H., June 22 (AP)—Search for two prisoners who escaped from the naval prison in Portsmouth yesterday shifted today to White River Junction, Vt., as a result of a story told the Dover police by Charles A. Tucker, a traveling salesman of this city.

Tucker said he was forced at the point of a revolver to drive two men resembling the convicts from a point near Sanford, Me., to White River Junction.

The escaped prisoners, Frank O'Neal and William B. Henderson, fled the prison after beating a guard unconscious.

Tucker said that about noon yesterday he was driving his car between North Berwick and Sanford, Me., when a man stepped from some underbrush and beckoned him to stop. He was about to disregard the signal when the man drew a revolver and Tucker stopped his car. Another man appeared and they forced Tucker into the rear seat, the man who held the revolver taking the wheel.

Tucker said they drove throughout the day without stopping, skirting towns and cities, until about 7 o'clock in the evening, when the gasoline became exhausted on a country road. There the men alighted, Tucker said, and told him they had no further use for him. He discovered he was about 20 miles from White River Junction.

Tucker obtained a supply of gasoline at a farmhouse and notified the police and his employer by telephone.

20 Killed in Train Crash in Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden, June 22 (AP)—A report from Bollnas, in eastern Sweden, today told of the wrecking of the Northern express near there with a death list estimated variously between 20 and 40 persons.

First accounts said the express was wrecked when an extra engine left the Bollnas station too soon, resulting in a collision. Both locomotives were overturned and four coaches telescoped and burst into flames.

The dead included Johann Johannsson, leader of the Peasants' party and the engineer and fireman of the express train. The crew of the other engine also was believed killed.

MORE SAFETY DON'TS URGE CAUTION

By FRANK A. GOODWIN

Highway Safety Editor, Boston Evening American, and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Now that we have told you all about the winners of the first three prizes in the Mothers' Safety Don'ts contest, I feel that some of the mothers who won honorable mention should be heard from.

After all, the lists of Don'ts submitted, were the essence of the drive. There were many not among the prize-winners that embodied excellent ideas.

That is why I believe in publishing those which the judges found worthy of special mention—those in the honor roll. We wish all mothers of New England to get the benefit of every possible constructive idea in this war against motor accidents.

Frank A. Goodwin

DON'TS IN VERSE

There are other phases of motor traffic which I plan to discuss after we let you read some more "Mothers Safety-Don'ts." Mrs. Edwin Underhill of Auburn, N. H., cleverly put her Don'ts in verse:

Don't look
Unless you listen.
Don't be blinded
By polished glisten.
Don't tread
In autos' path.
Don't cross
Till need one hath.
Don't delay—
Be nimble, quick!
Don't play
Where traffic's thick.
Don't hurry—
Haste makes waste.
Don't scurry
When danger's faced
Don't defy
The dreadd WORST.
Don't forget
That Safety's First.

TWO OTHER LISTS

Mrs. M. J. Welsh, 1140 Commonwealth ave., Allston, submitted these.

1—Don't neglect to have the children's eyes examined.
2—Don't fail to explain meaning of STOP, LOOK and LISTEN—in an interesting manner. Make a story of it.
3—Don't neglect to warn your children every day. You will then make them naturally careful.
4—Don't send children on unnecessary errands.
5—Don't hurry your children. A nervous child is always in danger.
6—Don't insist on their playing where you can see them when there is a playground nearby. Take them or have them taken and call for them.
7—Don't let little Jane (five) take the baby out.
8—Don't let your children out on stormy days.
9—Don't have your children airing a dog stronger than themselves.
10—Don't allow the kiddies to skate near a driveway, also be careful where they coast.

Mrs. Rudolph Keelin, 321 Brewell ave., Norwich, Ct., puts them short and snappy, as follows:

1—Don't steal rides.
2—Don't beg rides.
3—Don't ride on running boards.
4—Don't play on roads, streets or highways.
5—Don't disregard crossing signals.
6—Don't cross streets except at crossings.
7—Don't fail to look up and down street before crossing.
8—Don't run into street from between parked cars.

LAST RITES IN CAMBRIDGE FOR MISS CASSIE FULLER

Funeral services were held this morning at St. Paul's Church for Miss Cassie J. Fuller, of Hampton Hall, director of the dramatical department in Jordan Marsh Co., Boston, for years. Miss Fuller, who had long been a resident of Cambridge, died Tuesday night in St. Elizabeth's hospital.

A solemn high mass of requiem was sung with Rev. Denis J. Fitzpatrick as celebrant. Music was rendered with Ruth Driscoll and Emma Twohig as soloists. Members of the Jordan Marsh Co., including W. A. Hawkins, Thomas F. Looney, John V. Finn, B. W. Taylor, W. Parr and A. McKittrick, were pallbearers.

DEMOCRAT WILL OPPOSE CONGRESSWOMAN ROGERS

Lowell, June 22—A Democratic candidate will be put in the field to oppose Congresswoman Edith N. Rogers, Cornelius F. Cronin, chairman of the Democratic city committee, announced just as the local delegation to the Democratic national convention at Houston was ready to leave for Texas.

Cronin declined to name his candidate, but he said a strong local ticket would be put in the field. He also took out papers at the election commission office for Democratic candidates for the State Senate to oppose Senators Cotton of Lexington and Perham of Chelmsford, who now represent the Lowell wards.

EVANGELIST SMITH'S WIFE WINS DIVORCE

Bridgeport, Ct., June 22 (INS)—The wife of Pat Smith, evangelist, was given an absolute divorce today, with custody of their one child. LEGION LEADER LAUDS FULLER ON SACCO CASE

Praise was accorded Gov. Fuller for his Sacco-Vanzetti decision, at the risk of his own life and the safety of his family, in a speech by John W. Reth, state commander of the American Legion, at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, today, at the second day's session of the convention of the Massachusetts legion auxiliary.

Election of the chief officers of the auxiliary was accomplished without appealed contests.

Miss Adelaide Fitzgerald of Hopkinton, a vice-president, was the only nominee to succeed Mrs. George W. Knowlton, Jr., as president and her election was a formality.

Mrs. Lillian M. Burnham and Mrs. Winifred E. May were re-elected vice-presidents. Miss Mary T. Whittaker was re-elected secretary, and Miss May L. Mahoney was re-elected treasurer.

"The American Legion and the auxiliary of Massachusetts have been responsive to the needs of community, state and nation," said Commander Reth in his address. "We know that, in spite of the feeling in some places outside this state, Gov. Fuller deserves the approbation of the entire nation for the manner in which he handled the most trying situation of his administration.

POWER TRUST RUNS UP THE BILL AND PUBLIC PAYS

coupled with the revelation of a case of "lobbying" kept by Power trust employes over members of the United States Senate, in attempts to influence legislation, and a movement to deny the use of unfriendly radio broadcasters.

Propagandizing halls, former Senator George H. Williams, Republican, of Missouri, as a "blood brother" Tory pronounced him "first naturally, last."

They failed utterly in an audacious attempt to reach Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

IDENTIFIES DOCUMENTS.

State regulating commissioners appointed to protect the public from excessive rates were pictured "the best friends of the industry."

It was S. H. Sheridan of St. Louis who blew the lid off and sent it sailing sky high. He sat through a record long day in the commission's hearing room with more than a thousand of his letters and scores of his reports being his talking for him. Sheridan, director of the propaganda bureau in Missouri for seven years, merely identified the documents and put in a word of explanation now and then.

His epoch of certain utility financing was given in two letters he wrote after spending years in the inner councils of propagandists, whose handiwork and influence blanket the schools and press of the country.

LETTERS NEVER SENT

His own and other records showed the object of the propaganda is to suppress knowledge of this financial juggling.

Sheridan has been "bothered" for months past, on his own testimony, by the methods of extremists among the utility kings he serves. His letters were written in revolt against these methods. They were never sent, according to Sheridan, because they were "a little too frank." But he stood by them on the witness stand yesterday.

He lamented in the letters that these utility kings failed to remember their properties were not "loaded dice to be employed in a craps game, in which investors and the public are injured." And they "smeared the other 90 per cent" of the industry.

Editors of country newspapers were characterized as "Chloe's fools" in another Sheridan letter. He baited them with advertising, much of it apparently merely bromided, and suppress public protest against increases in rates charged for electric power and light and other utility service.

SUIT FOR DRY AGENT'S INSURANCE SETTLED

Worcester, June 22—A $7500 suit which Mrs. Mary A. Mulcahy of North Brookfield brought in Superior Court against the Travelers' Insurance Company to recover on a policy issued to her son, the late John M. Mulcahy, federal prohibition enforcement agent who was shot in a raid on a camp near Lowell, on Sept. 9, 1923, was settled during the trial today. Judge Philip J. O'Connell dismissed a jury which had been drawn to hear it. The terms of the settlement were not made public.

NEW YORK CITY.

February 11, 1928.

Mr. H. M. Blain,
Director, Bien de Levier,
1428 Hibernia Building,
New Orleans, La.

My dear Blain:

I congratulate you on the publication of "Miss Lou Review". I wouldn't dare to attempt any such thing in the schools here in the east. I don't see how you can get away with it like you do, but you certainly deserve credit for the good work you are doing.

Yours very truly,

IF IT'S DONE WITH HEAT YOU CAN DO IT BETTER WITH GAS

Charles W. Person, propagandist for the American Gas Association, confesses himself outclassed in this letter to H. M. Blain, director of the Louisiana-Mississippi utility propaganda organization in New Orleans. Blain is a soft-voiced doctor of philosophy with horn-rimmed specs and a bow tie. His prodigious feat is his circulation of 13,000 copies a month of a pamphlet, "Miss Lou Review," in schools of the Southwest. "I wouldn't dare attempt any such thing in the schools here in the East," Person writes. "I don't see how you can get away with it like you do, but you certainly deserve credit for the good work you are doing." The "good work" was putting before the school children the kind of information the utilities wanted them to absorb.

WALSH VISITS DAY NURSERY

How children live on 10 cents a day at the South End Day Nursery was told to United States Senator David I. Walsh when he spent an hour with the youngsters as a visitor at

Mrs. Ida M. Brown, superintendent, assured Walsh about the nursery, explaining that 10 cents a day was all that was charged for caring for the youngsters, giving them a noon meal and supper and a sunny place in which to play. Careful supervision also is kept over their health.

If the weather is bad indoor games are arranged. After dinner comes nap time and then the children can play more games until supper. Shortly after leaving the nursery Senator Walsh departed for Houston, Tex., to attend the Democratic national convention.

BORDERLAND

KEROSENE

When our engineers found that knocking, fouling, oil-dilution and loss of power came from the "borderland" mixture in ordinary gasoline—we immediately set out to eliminate every trace of this mixture from Colonial Gasoline. Thousands of dollars were invested in special equipment and exclusive processes. Vast amounts of "commercially usable" gasoline are sacrificed every day to insure the absolute freedom from "borderland."

Today motorists by the thousands in New England and New York are enjoying a new measure of power, pick-up, and mileage for which they'd gladly pay a premium price. Yet this extra quality of New Colonial costs them nothing extra. For New Colonial sells at the price of ordinary gasoline.

COMMITTEE STUDIES STATE HOUSE RUM CASE

Senator Hugh A. Crong of Methuen, chairman of the special committee of the Legislature appointed to investigate the alleged liquor situation at the State House, said after the committee had held an executive session that the members are still studying the result of the investigation by the special commission on liquor situation and finance. The committee will not meet again until next Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

No action has yet been taken, said Senator Crong, on the request of Frank A. Goldwin, counsel for Freeman Dickinson, State Under Inspector and H. M. Comerford, agent for the Engineers Local 281, that public hearings be given by the committee on alleged rum that liquor was served unlawfully transported from the confiscated rum storeroom in the Department of Public Safety.

GYPSIES HOLD UP MAN ON ROAD, STEAL $80

Willimantic, Ct., June 22.—Four gypsies, three women and one man, in a coach equipped with California markers, figured in a holdup opposite the Gen. Nathaniel Lyon Cemetery.

The victim was Leo Crepeau, 30, of Phoenixville. Crepeau was walking along the side of the road, when the car stopped, one of the women and the man got out of the car and struck Crepeau and knocked him down, and going through the old man's pockets took $80 and a gold watch. The bandits then boarded the car and hastened in the direction of this city.

A Story of Love and the French Revolution

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

CLEONIE DE MONTSORBIER, a noblewoman, fleeing in the costume of a boy peasant from death in the French Revolution, has found refuge in the chateau of the former Vicomte de Corbal. She has told him of her adventurous trip across France, traveling by night and hiding by day, but he has not informed her that he himself awaits execution. The Tribunal of the town of Poussignot has given him three days in which to marry his maid-servant, Filomene, in order to demonstrate that he is not bound by aristocratic class prejudice. Meanwhile he has given Cleonie a lodging for the night.

CHAPTER XXI.

"MAMEMOISELLE, remain yet another day with us. The more complete now your rest, the better speed will you make after so that the time will not be lost."

Thus Monsieur de Corbal to his guest on the morning afternoon. They sat in the library, whither he had earlier conducted her; an untidy, dusty room panelled in soiled white on all sides but one, which was packed from floor to ceiling with serried ranks of books. Its furnishings were handsome and as massive as anything produced in the reign of Louis XV., but they were, like all else in the house, an air of dilapidation. The litter on the spacious writing table testified at once to a studious industry and to negligence.

Mmeinoiselle de Montsorbier, occupying a window-seat along which was stretched one of her slim, pantaloned legs, demurred at the proposal, expressed the opinion that she had best push on at dusk; that, in fact, she could not think of subject

Prisoner Gets a Pardon That's Out of Kilter

Columbia, S. C., June 22 (AP)—Sentenced to 30 years imprisonment for an assault on a white woman and pardoned, after nearly 13 years on the sworn statement of the woman herself that he was innocent, Ben Boyd, a negro, was back behind the bars today while state officials considered what could be done about a pardon issued under a misapprehension.

Taking the woman's affidavit in good faith, Governor John G. Richards said he felt he could not have acted otherwise, but now, she declares in a second affidavit that she never intended to say Tees was not guilty, she can't read or write beyond signing her name and says that in the original statement she intended merely to express sympathy for Boyd. That was what the document said when she signed it.

The second affidavit was presented in the course of a grand jury investigation ordered by Governor Richards. The jury reported there was "nothing in the evidence" to support the contention made in the negro's appeal for clemency that he had been wrongfully imprisoned.

The county authorities have referred the case back to the Governor and the Attorney-General of the state asking advice as to what steps should now be taken. The pardon, which was issued two months ago, is held to be irrevocable, and it is contended that to bring Boyd to trial again would constitute "double jeopardy."

Springfield, June 22—Miss Julia R. Huston of Hyde Park today formally entered her candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Auditor against Alonzo B. Cook, present incumbent. She took out nomination papers from the office of the Board of Registration.

THIRD WIFE CHARGES PASTOR IS CRUEL

D. A. R. 'DISTURBER' RETURNS DEFIANT

Mrs. Helen Tufts Baillie, storm center of the Daughters of the American Revolution because of her expose of the famous "blacklist" and her denunciation of it, reached Boston today in a defiant mood after her trial at Washington.

She was charged with being a "disturber."

Many widely known Boston men and women whose names grace the "blacklist" greeted their champion when she arrived.

No announcement was made by her judges, who include some 40 women prominent socially throughout the country, but even the friends of the Cambrige woman believe that the ultimate decision will be "guilty."

The trial was held behind closed doors in Continental Memorial Hall in Washington. Mrs. Baillie was represented by Atty. Lawrence G. Brooks of Boston and Atty. George Alger of New York.

The indictment against her was signed by 19 members of the D. A. R., the counts being that she disturbed the peace and harmony of the organization by making public the "blacklist" and denouncing it.

Mrs. Baillie was the only witness for the defense. She admitted the facts charged against her but contended that they constituted no violation either of the letter or the spirit of the rules and regulations of the D. A. R. She does not feel that actions had been all in good faith and in the "real interests" of the society.

"The criticisms made by me," Mrs. Baillie told her judges, "were truthful and made for the purpose of remedying conditions, and of restoring peace and harmony, which has been destroyed by the conduct of officers of the society and not by me."

The prosecution contended that Mrs. Baillie has spread, not alone in this country, but throughout the entire world, statements injurious to the good name of the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and charged that she made many misstatements.

Mrs. Baillie was charged with having organized a committee, which she called the "D. A. R. Committee of Protest," in violation of the by-laws of the society and did so to give it the semblance of an official committee.

The board was informed that Mrs. Baillie was not prompted by sincere motives in her alleged criticism.

BOY SAVES WOMAN IN RIVER

Lads once P. McBride, 17-year-old Watertown high school athlete, is being praised for his daring rescue of a woman from the waters of the Charles.

Mrs. Marion Webster, 33, of 71 Walnut st., Watertown was the woman he saved last night in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, recovering from effects of the ordeal.

Police say Mrs. Webster leaped into the river from a drive at the Metropolitan recreation in Watertown with the intention of committing suicide. Her husband, Herbert Webster, is said to have told police that his wife had had some words with her daughter, Ruth, 15.

McBride, who expects to enter college this fall, was captain last year of the Watertown high football team and also was a member of the track team.

Young McBride is the son of Sylvester J. McBride of the Boston Evening American composing room and former president of Typographical Union 13.

Rescued Monkey Becomes Regular Fire Enthusiast

There is money business at the three fire stations of the Weymouth department.

At the recent fire in the Colonial Inn the firemen came upon and rescued a cage of monkeys. The proprietor of the inn had no further use for the animals, so he presented them to the fire department, and now one is installed at each of the stations.

The monk at the Weymouth Landing station has already become a "spark," and wants to go out on the apparatus on every alarm.

DAUGHTER BLAMED IN SUIT

Many Malden church folk hurried to Cambridge early today to hear the details in the divorce suit brought by Myrtle V. Carter against the Rev. William Wade Carter, pastor of the Eastern Avenue Baptist Church of Malden.

Alleging cruelty and asking custody of a two-year-old son, Mrs. Carter, told the court that relations with her husband ceased a year after their marriage in Chicago in 1924. She is the pastor's third wife and only half his age.

The pastor's 20-year-old daughter, Berma, by his first wife, is responsible for much of the trouble, the wife testified.

The wife objected to the company the girl was keeping, she told the court, and the annoying attentions of a suitor who persisted in coming to the house despite her repeated requests to her husband to prohibit him.

The pastor threatened her she recited with an iron ornament raised a kitchen chair over his head and told me to 'mush your mouth' or he would kill her.

"But his daughter, Berma, interfered and said, 'Daddy, don't kill her!' and of course he put down the chair," she testified.

ORANGE PARADE ROUTE NOW IN THE MAKING

War looms for Boston on July 12

Two rival camps of Orangemen wish to celebrate the day, and each claims the exclusive right to hold said celebration.

The Board of Street Commissioners are attempting to iron out the difficulty today, but it appears that there is a battle in prospect whatever the board's decision may be.

Both the State Grand Orange Lodge of the Loyal Orange Institution and the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, Loyal Orange Institution, Inc., have applied for the same parade route on the anniversary morning and each insists it is the one and only genuine organization.

CLAIM 1,500 MARCHERS

Because of the testimony at previous hearings that the grand officers of the rival nomingents have clashed with fists in attempts to demonstrate their historical authority, Chairman Thomas J. Hurley of the Street Commission is satisfied that both outfits shall not meet and join traffic.

Claiming 1500 marchers, Edward H. Riley of 180 Massachusetts ave, Back Bay, filed the parade application for the State Grand Orange Lodge, requesting permission to form at Copley sq. at 9 o'clock on the morning of July 12, to parade by way of Boylston and Emery sts. to the South Station, there they plan to entrain for Mayflower Grove to celebrate the festive day.

FOR EARLY START

The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts has applied for the same route for 600 marchers through Albert J. Hall, secretary, of 16 Willoughby st., Somerville. They plan to take the 9 o'clock train at the South Station for Lake Pearl, where the clan will celebrate.

The commission has tentatively decided to order the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts to leave Copley sq. not later than 8:30 a. m., so that they will be gone before the members of the State Grand Lodge arrive.

CRASH UPSETS MAIL TRUCK

Four children escaped injury when an automobile driven by the 7-year-old Frank Jaworesky, of Silver st., South Boston, crashed into a mail truck at Atlantic ave. and Beach st. The truck was upset.

Henry Bornstein, 28 years old, of 661 Dot Fourth st., South Boston, driver of the mail truck, was thrown from his seat, injuring his back and left arm.

Letter carriers stood guard over the wrecked truck until another car arrived on the scene and the sacks of mail were transferred.

150 WEAVERS IN WAGE STRIKE

Fall River, June 22—Nearly 150 weavers of the Stafford Mills, who went out on the vegetable, said that they will be joined by most of those employed unless the mill management agrees to a wage increase.

They claim that the average pay is but $12.50 a week and that the mill management refused to confer with their representative, John L. Campos.

NINE KILLED, 35 HURT IN RAILROAD ACCIDENT

London, June 22—Nine persons were instantly killed and 35 were seriously injured when a speeding express train crashed into an engine stalled on a siding at Princess, Sawley, 200 miles north of Stockholm, a Central News dispatch from Stockholm states.

Three coaches of the express train were derailed by the crash. The engine caught fire and some of the bodies of the victims were burned beyond identification.

It is said more dead will be found. The train was bound for

HUNT 2 HOLDUP MEN USING FAKE PISTOL

Lowell, N. H., June 22—A search by police of the Lincoln woods section has failed to find the two men who attempted to hold up A. J. Dubois of Manchester on the Weirs boulevard.

Dubois was driving south on the boulevard when two men stepped out and ordered him to stop the car. When the car came to a stop one of the men pointed a pistol at Dubois and ordered him to get out. Dubois, seeing the gun, drove away. The pistol was found to be a hard rubber squirt gun.

Talks to Cooks

AT LEE SCHOOL

Miss Marguerite J. Gibbone, sales service representative of the Fleishmann Co., gave the 175 housewives who were graduated at Martha Lee's School of Practical Cookery an interesting talk on sweet dough products.

175 DIPLOMAS AWARDED BY MARTHA LEE

One more milestone on the road of success was passed yesterday afternoon when 175 New England housewives were graduated at special exercises in Martha Lee's School of Practical Cookery at 5 Winthrop sq.

To qualify for their diplomas, these housewives attended the school for 12 consecutive weeks. Many of them in fact attended all three lessons given in each of the 12 weeks, although it was only necessary to attend once weekly for the diploma.

Out-of-town Boston and such cities as Providence, Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill and Worcester were represented in the list of graduates.

The speaker of the afternoon was Managing Editor Edward R. Mahoney of the Boston Evening American. Dr. P. H. Mulloney, director of Stone Health Laboratories, also spoke on the work he is doing in the food world.

Another interesting feature was a talk by Miss Marguerite J. Gibbons, sales service representative of the Fleishmann Co. Miss Gibons has been co-operating with our local bakers in perfecting new sweet dough products. There are now many delightful varieties of these sweet goods on sale in this city and Miss Gibbons displayed some of the more popular ones and suggested the various uses to which these products can be put.

No party, of course, is complete without refreshments and these were present in abundance. The main feature was chop suey, using the La Choy products, furnished through the courtesy of Edward A. Oakes, and the serving of Mavis, the pep chocolate drink. This was furnished by Thomas Fitzgerald of the Mavis Bottling Co. of New England.

Chelmsford pale dry ginger ale also was served, furnished by H. H. Clubberley of the Chelmsford Ginger Ale Co., and Surprise Packages of Lowe-Wiles assorted crackers, as well as sweet baked goods furnished by the Fleischmann Co.

The school will be closed until early in September when the third class will open. Enrollments are already being received for this. The lessons will be on Monday and Thursday as usual at 2:30 p. m. We would suggest an early enrollment to avoid later disappointment when the class may be full.

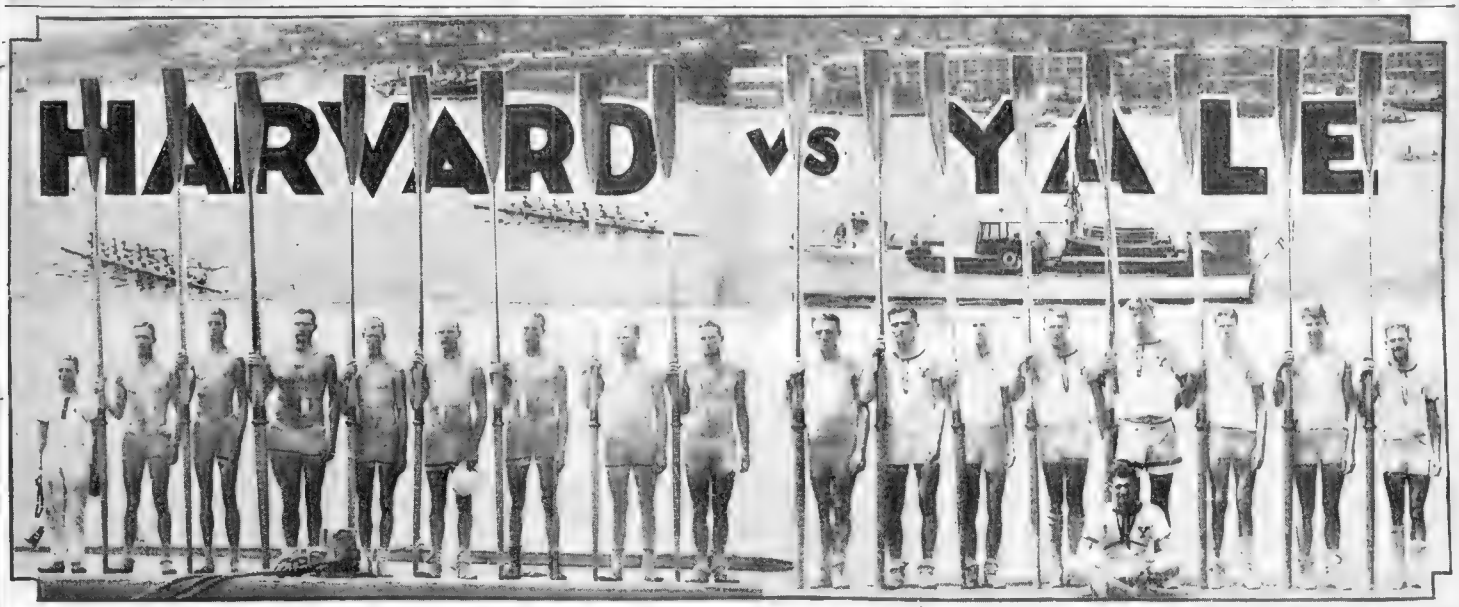
YALE CREWS WIN FIRST TWO RACES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN — FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1928



STALWART OARSMEN WHO STRUGGLE OVER FOUR-MILE COURSE TODAY

What a group of giants. Left to right are: Carl Pforzheimer, cox; Stroke John Watts; Guy Murchie, Forrester Clark, W. A. Saltonstall, C. E. Mason, William Summel, L. Dickey and T. Hubbard. The four-mile grind is one of the toughest things in sport. Perfect condition is an essential. And lots of heart. Yale oarsmen are, left to right: B. W. Taylor, R. C. Cushman, S. P. MacAlmont, J. A. Rodgers, L. W. Ladd, M. W. Garmsey; R. C. Durant, W. R. Tapper and, seated in front, P. H. Stewart, cox. This crew averages eight pounds lighter than the Crimson. They have a faster start than the Cambridge group. However, the heavier crew has more stamina than the Yale boatsmen. So the crews should average up. The race will be close. MURPHY-MELLO BOUT CARDED FOR TUESDAY

By JACK CONWAY

The weather man, having handed every other fight club in the vicinity a knockout blow at some time or other, is now engaged in combat with the Arena A. C. and has piled up a big lead.

The Mello-Murphy bout, originally scheduled to take place at Fenway Park last evening, was set ahead for the second time today when the elements showed no signs of returning to normalcy.

It now goes over to Tuesday night in the hope that the sun will shine long enough in the meantime to dry up Bob Quinn's cardyard.

Both fighters are more than dispondent over the postponements, as each is confident of winning and wants to get the thing over with as soon as possible.

Mello's New England welterweight title will be at stake. The champion will have to show his best form if he is to turn back the drive of the youthful Murphy.

Alex MacLean and many other keen judges of the fistic game are strongly along with Murphy. They are of the opinion his superior speed and skill will enable him to pull out a victory.

Jack Conway

Meanwhile Mello rules a favorite in the betting. It has always been thus when a champion has come to the post. The crowd always remains under the title holder's banner until he has gone down to defeat.

Mello is set for a fierce hard bout. He conditioned himself at Camp Wilson's camp at Ossenning, N. Y. He realizes Murphy is the best man he has ever met with the possible exception of Ace Hudkins. He plans to make a real fight out of it and is confident his punches too hard and too fast for the challenger.

THE Merrimac valley will be like a deserted village as Mello and Murphy settle the question of ring supremacy. Both boxers have large home town followings which will come to the Hub to see this question of ring supremacy settled.

The first 10 rows in a two-fisted fashion and Murphy a clever boxer would indicate that it will be a strenuous tussle. Battle between a fighter and a boxer are usually satisfactory. When there are two boxers in the ring, the milling is apt to drag. When two highly touted punchers meet, each is usually afraid of the other and the cash customers fail to get any dividends.

Bobby Goldman will act as Mello's chief second. He has guided the champion since the latter was in the amateurs and has been largely responsible for his success.

Al Lacey of Chelsea will act as Murphy's chief second in the absence of Manager Johnny Buckley who is in St. Louis with Jack Sharkey, the former mainstay of the stable. Lacey has always handled Red Chapman and is one of the best seconds in the country.

RINGSIDE boxes have been reserved for Governor Fuller, Lieut.-Gov. Allen, Mayor Nichols and Mayor Corbett of Lowell. Many other notables will attend the first boxing show to be held at Fenway Park since Bob Quinn purchased the Red Sox.

A band concert, special lights over the ring and other features will add to the hurrah. The ring will be pitched at home plate.

CHARLEY DONOVAN, rugged Dorchester welterweight, will have Pete Pacheco, Denver Indian, as an opponent in the semifinal of eight rounds. When these boys met recently, Donovan won a questionable decision after a torrid mixup.

Another return match of eight rounds will bring together Jackie Donahue of South Boston and Murray Layton of New York. In their last skirmish, the verdict went to Layton after a hard scrap.

A six-round setto will bring together Connie Holmes of the South End and Jimmy Connolly of Brockton.

Another six-session affair will be between Ike Diamond of the West End and Battling Bandrelli of the North End.

Ray Cross of Milford and Frankie O'Day of Woonsocket will step four rounds. The Arena Club's office is at No. 233 Washington st.

McLarnin Stops McGraw In First

New York, June 22 (AP)—Smiling Jimmy McLarnin, the baby-faced Irish lad who enthroned himself in the heart of New York fight fans in his first Eastern appearance by a crashing one-round knockout of Sid Terris, Manhattan's pride of the Ghetto has come back to his throne. After a month spent in the shade cast by the terrific drubbing he received at the hands of the hapless Leo Lomski, Jimmy Mandell, Jimmy made a successful comeback last night by stopping Phil McGraw after only two minutes, 45 seconds of the first round.

WALKER WINS QUESTIONABLE DECISION

Chicago, June 22 (AP)—The Irish dog is still champion, but he needs marks and by ease of a questionable decision over Jack Dempsey, the Manassa Mauler, last night in the semifinal of eight rounds.

After 10 pleasing, slugging rounds that finished a torrential downpour of rain last night at Comiskey Park, Mickey Walker, the Bulldog was declared the winner of the verdict over Jack Dempsey, the Manassa Mauler, last night in the semifinal of eight rounds.

Walker retained his welterweight crown on a 2-to-1 decision. The judges, Steve Carroll and Edward Kelly, gave their verdicts to Referee Joe Rivers. Eddie Purdy, last bout lasted a trifle longer.

In the socked and sudden passing with the Walker to show that he came out of the fray for Dempsey unscathed.

Most of the experts gave Ace a margin in six of the 10 rounds, while many credited the blond wildcat with as many as seven, to offset, in a consensus, the few who figured Walker was justly the winner.

Promoter Mullen Lost $15,000 on Title Bout

Chicago, June 22 (AP)—The man who took it on the chin at last night's welterweight championship was Jim Mullen, the promoter.

His loss on the fight between Champion Mickey Walker and Challenger Ace Hudkins cost him $15,000 at least. Walker fought with a $75,000 guarantee and Hudkins's share was $25,000. Total receipts from the approximately 20,000 spectators reached about $125,000, he said.

Ball Falters in Second Round of Open Tourney

FIRST-ROUND LEADER TURNS IN CARD OF 81

...s ball was on the edge of the ...brook cost him another shot, giving him a total of 39 to the turn.

Ball looked bad going out, but he ran worse on the inward round, gathering no less than three 6's. He drained home with a 6 on the 16th, due to a hooked drive and his failure to get out of the rough on his second. He overshot the 11th green, but a fine chip shot put him in position to get down with one putt for a 4. Then he proceeded to three putt the 12th for a 5 and missed a "gimme" 3 on the 13th by a scant margin. Another hooked tee shot off the 14th cost him another stroke and the 6 he wrote down. He was in the 15th in 5, but came on with three more putts for another 6 and his third three-putter was the home hole for his fourth 6 of the round.

Ball's card:

Out ..... 4 5 6 4 4 3 4 4 5—39
In ..... 6 4 5 3 5 6 3 4 6—42—81

While Oez of Worcester and Joe Fream of Dedham have pledged themselves from the campaign, Peg knocked ten strokes off her first round by turning in a 78 this morning and Fream showed a two-stroke improvement, but they were both 166 for the double round and well out of the running.

MacFARLANE LEADING

While MacFarlane, who carried off the open title at Worcester two years ago after a 36-hole play-off with Bobby Jones in competition, has led with a 147. The two-ball foursome from Newton-on-the-Charles added 74 to their score-card for a low 147 score on a par 72 stroke advantage over Frank Hall and Joe Mitchell of South Shore Country Club, Hingham.

Hall's position was in some trouble during the outward holes, but from the ninth he played wonderful golf, put the sensational brand to that low scoring MacFarlane turn which brought him through unexpectedly in 1925.

FLOODLIGHT BALL GAME AT LYNN

Lynn fans will flock in large numbers to the General Electric Field Friday evening, when the Knights of Columbus baseball league of Lynn stages a floodlight game, band concert, and other forms of entertainment in aid of ball players that are injured during the present season.

At present there are five members of the league on the injured list, namely: Tommy Byrnes of the General Electric club; Tommy Maione and Chick Hayes of the Standard Brothers; Ken Berger, Y. M. H. A., and Buster Hennessey of the Swampscott Town Team.

This is the third attempt at floodlight baseball and the officials of the league have invited the players of both the Braves and Brooklyn teams to witness the experiment.

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Braves, and George Sisler have given their word that they will be on hand and may even step up to the plate and hit a few to see what floodlight baseball is like.

The game will be between St. Michael's, winner of the first half of the league, and an all-star team picked from the league by Tom Whelan, coach of Lynn English high school and manager of the Lynn New England League team.

He will also coach the all-star team on the field while Bill Joyce, Lynn Classical coach, will handle the St. Michael club.

The game will start at 9 o'clock and music will be furnished by Gove's band.

TILDEN WINS OVER COEN, 6-2, 6-2

London, June 22 (AP)—Big Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter won their way into the final round of the London tennis championships at the Queen's Club today.

Tilden eliminated Junior Coen, the 16-year-old Kansas City player, 6—2, 6—2, while Hunter eliminated the Australian Davis Cup player Hopman, 6—4, 2—6.

In the doubles Tilden and Hunter defeated Henri Cochet and Jean Lacoste in the brilliant French pair, 6—1, 6—4.

Tilden was in depth of the opposition that the Australian was held for his strongest game. He met up with the result that for the first time this week the 16-year-old Kansan's star was on the defensive.

Coen, however, kept a cool head and the fast, deceptive speed already has made him a player of future and defended his court with decided the admirer of the old service of his opponent. He never lost an opportunity to make a winning drive on the ball.

The crowd was rooting hardy for Coen when he won the fifth and sixth games of the second set, securing the first break in the match. The youthful player took the two games with a series of brilliant forehand drives to Tilden's forehand court, but he just kept it up for a time. Tilden took the next two games in succession, going into the final set.

Martha Lee Tells of 5 O'Clock Desserts

IF we owned Aladdin's wonderful lamp, we would rub it every afternoon at about 4:30. And when the genii appeared and asked us to state our every wish, we invariably make the same request: "Bring the dessert for tonight's dinner."

Dozens of housekeepers of our acquaintance plan most of the main dishes of their dinners and the dessert is the only item they wait until all through the morning and afternoon for inspiration. Then, pleased & relieved they begin to get panic stricken. They run through the pages of cook books in a feverish anxiety to find a dessert that can be manufactured out of the simplest ingredients in a few moments of time, and one that will be presentable even for a company dinner.

The following recipes are for desserts that answer all of these qualifications. We have called them 5 o'clock desserts, not because they are eaten at that hour, but because they need not even be thought of until an hour before dinner is to be served.

Martha Lee

Pineapple Sponge Cake—Whip one egg until half of heavy cream. Add to mixture one cup of cooking sugar, 1 tbs. hot water and 1 cup of sponge cake flour sifted with 1 tsp. baking powder. Bake in shallow pan. Cut cake in squares and split each piece. Fill between layers with pineapple sliced thin. Cover with whipped cream and serve.

Apple Fluff—Put a can of apple sauce (fresh or canned) and fold in ½ cup of chopped nuts and ½ cup chopped dates. Chill and serve very cold. This recipe serves eight.

Peach Snow—With a wire egg beater beat the whites of three eggs on a platter. When the egg whites are stiff, grad ally add two cups of powdered sugar and one cup of well drained sliced peaches. Chill thoroughly, pile lightly on rounds of sponge cake and serve garnished with chopped nuts. This will make six portions.

Raspberry Whip—Whip one-half pint of cream. Sweeten and flavor with vanilla. Spread a layer of raspberry jam over plain cake, and lightly pile the whipped cream on top. Strawberry whip may be made in a similar manner, using strawberry preserves. Serves eight.

Peach and Cherry Sponge—Cut sponge cake in rounds with a cookie cutter. Slightly moisten each round with the juice from maraschino cherries. Cut ½ of a peach (fresh or canned), cut side up, on each piece of cake, and fill the cavities with halved maraschino cherries. Top with whipped cream and serve.

Apricot Squares—Do a can of apricots and cut apricots in quarters. Thicken apricot juice with cornstarch and sweeten to taste. Add apricots and cook until tender. Cut sponge cake in squares, place canned apricots on squares. Thin the apricot sauce with top milk and stir until well blended and cream. Pour over the apricots, top with another square of cake and garnish with more of the thinned marshmallow cream and apricots.

Faithfully yours
MARTHA LEE.

Poor Quality of Eggs Menace to Health

Dr. P. M. Mullowney

Director Hearst Health Laboratory

Housekeepers are warned to watch that they are not induced to purchase eggs of poor quality offered them by unscrupulous dealers.

Attention of the Hearst Laboratory has been directed to the fact that eggs alleged to have been taken from incubators have been brought to Boston from other states and may be thrown on the market. Federal inspectors are conducting an investigation to establish proof of violation of the interstate commerce regulations.

At the present time, when the price of eggs is low, comparatively, eggs are candied out or cold storage. Only eggs in the best of condition are available for cold storage.

Unfit eggs, such as "dirties," "checks" and "leakers," cannot be used for cold storage purposes and these are sorted out.

The names are highly descriptive of the condition of the eggs. Particular attention should be given to bring out the "leakers," because contaminating air and surroundings have a better opportunity to work damage to the eggs.

Mould and dirt can gather on the surface of the egg and get into the contents through the broken shell. Large amounts of these "dirties," "checks" and "leakers" are sold to egg breakers for the purpose of breaking out and freezing in cold storage.

Dr. Mullowney

The use of incubator eggs is particularly objectionable as the egg shell, after it is peeled in the breaking and which is said to be sterile is removed from the carcass.

Unfit eggs have many markets. In one instance where a seizure was made of some cases of unwholesome eggs at a noodle factory. Presumably these eggs were to be candied out and such as could be salvaged were to be used in the product.

"Heated eggs," that is eggs which have been kept for too long a time at a high temperature, get spotted and unless used at once are apt to go bad quickly.

At one time, in this city, the trade in rotten eggs was a flourishing industry. Unscrupulous traders did a thriving business, utilizing many ingenious resources for disposing of what salvage could be obtained from rejected shipments.

LITTLE SINS

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard; a Battle of Hearts Between Girls

CHAPTER 45.

DOLLY was almost afraid to look around at Alan, for fear he might have overheard that final admonition. She devoted herself to her plate, wondering vaguely what had become of the first two courses. . . . She felt Alan's eyes; felt them so acutely that her cheeks burned. She kept on eating, taking very small, prim bites of this and that. A bite of fish. A nibble of bread. A sip of water.

"I hope," said Alan affably, "you choke."

She looked at him then, wide-eyed. "Ah," he said. "That's better. Insults get results. Now will you be good enough to drop that fork and give me your undivided attention for a moment.

She dropped the fork and folded her hands, hooking them to the table edge by her little fingers. "You have it."

"Why," he began sternly, "didn't you tell me?" He tapped the magazine.

"Well—for one thing, you said you were afraid of artists."

"I am! And if I'm afraid of artists, how do you think geniuses affect me?"

Dolly gurgled amusement. "Oh, you heard him?"

"Heard him! They heard him in Harlem! And when he pounded the table, pictures fell off the walls in Queens! Of course I heard him. And I hastened to open my own copy, to look for myself, and found to my unutterable confusion that the old baby's probably right!" He scowled fiercely. "You got that seal under false pretences, woman. You got it because I thought you and I were interlopers in the realm of arts, and should stick together. And now look at you!"

"Well," said Dolly meekly, "shall I move?"

They smiled together. Alan abandoned his bantering tone; he turned slightly sideways in his chair, the better to contemplate her. "I want to know all about it," he said. "I want to catch up. You were a model a year ago—and then what happened? And how? Now give me the low-down."

She explained, briefly, lightly. "Well, I'd been studying art off and on for two or three years, and about the time I met you I was just beginning to do something with it. I got a few odd jobs, and I used to take one day a week off from posing, and drew. I got along fairly well, and a couple of magazines took an interest in me, and pretty soon I had to take two days a week off. Then I picked up some commercial work, ads and such on sketches. And I sold another magazine a full-page drawing to go with a poem—a college boy I know wrote the poem—and they gave me a story to illustrate. My first story. About that time I began to take three days a week. And—" She paused. "And so it went."

"How many days," inquired Alan, "are you taking now?"

"All of them."

"Not posing any more?"

"No. I haven't for four or five months."

"I'm glad I didn't call you," he remarked thoughtfully.

She scanned him with interest. "Did you think of calling me?"

"Several times. I was going to call you and ask you to pose for some of our stuff. Ada, you know."

"Well, why didn't you?"

His Eyes Met Hers for a Clashing Instant, Then Fell

"I—just didn't." His eyes met hers for a strange, a clashing instant; then fell again. "I think I would have," he said, "before long, if I hadn't happened to run across you again. You see—it's just been lately that I thought of calling."

"Oh."

After a little deliberation Dolly said, picking her words, "I don't know whether that's complimentary or not. It's nice to be remembered after years—but it would be nice if you'd remembered me once or twice during that time."

"I mean remembered me when you needed a model," she added in some confusion, and blushed.

She looked very carefully at her plate, and was aware that Alan beside her was looking at him. From the tail of her eye she saw him spear two tiny French peas with his fork. "I remembered," he said "But I had a lot of things on my mind until lately."

"Oh," Dolly murmured again.

She took up her own fork, dabbed aimlessly with it.

"Gay divorced me, you know" said Alan.

Dolly laid down the fork again. She felt—unaccountably, idiotically—that it would tremble if she didn't. "Really?" she said.

Alan sent her a quick oblique glance. "I told you that day that she was going to."

"Yes, but I thought—I thought perhaps afterwards she—you—"

"No," he said. Merely that nothing more.

With one accord they turned away from one another then, and became necessarily polite to the persons on their other sides. Dolly asked Mr Hooker if it took his characters from real life or if he invented them, but to this day she does not know what he answered. She was absorbed in the thumping of her pulses, in the singing of her mind. She was busy with self-rebuke. "Little fool! Silly! Stop it! There's no reason for you to feel like this"

Presently she sensed that Alan had concluded his remarks to the lady on his right and turned back. At once she was in a fever to turn back also. Eric Harker's continuing voice filled her with unreasonable impatience. She wanted to say, "Never mind. Thanks just the same, but—never mind now."

At the first lull she smiled at the little old man, and nodded hurriedly. Then she set the small white V of her chin came around, left shoulder to right shoulder. . . .

"Hello," Alan grinned.

"Hello."

"You seem fascinated. What was he telling you, anyway?"

"He was telling me," Dolly said earnestly, "how he gets his fiction characters."

"How does he?"

"Well—he didn't make it very plain."

They were not to talk about Gay any more just now; Alan's eyes, his tone, his new mood, decreed it. Dolly cared not at all. She had no further curiosity. There had been divorce. If she—he—wanted any more than just that, she would not care to.

They were to talk about Dolly Alan insisted. "Go on," he urged. "Tell us lots more things." And he interrogated her, as had Eric Harker, and she answered him. Yes, she worked very hard indeed. Regular hours—nine till four or five. Yes, her time was pretty full.

Alan Opened the Magazine And Studied Her Illustrations

She had a contract with this new magazine, two illustrations an issue for one year, that would take a week or more every month. The rest of the time she would work on things for other publications, and on commercial orders. Of COURSE she'd do some lettering for his firm—if he wasn't just trying to be nice to her. Oh, any time he had something in her line. Not colors; she wasn't so good at colors. . . .

Again Alan opened the magazine and studied her illustrations. "Great," he said. "Honestly they are. They are, of course, it doesn't mean anything, coming from me." And then, "Who was your model for this girl?"

"Bee Standish," Dolly told him. "My very best friend. You've heard of Nick Standish, haven't you? He writes that 'Bagdad-on-the-Subway' column in the Star. Well, his wife, she was my roommate when I lived on Eighth st.—Bee James, she was then. She was a peach to pose for; she's my model now whenever I want her, bless her heart."

"She is very lovely."

"She is. She's marvelous."

Alan let the pages fall back into place. "So," he said, "you don't live on Eighth st. any more?"

"No. I moved in June, when Bee was married. I've got a little studio apartment on University pl. One of those," and Dolly, "that are all studio. You know."

"No, I don't, said Alan.

"Why, I mean the studio is so huge compared to the oth—" She broke off; laughed a little. "You were fooling," she said.

"I was hinting," said Alan.

"Oh. Well—you can come and see it some day, if that's what you mean."

"What days?"

"Oh—any day you like—except Tuesday and Thursday. Those are my days to pose. . . . this golden hour. I think. He is fond of compliments, and misunderstood or ignored. So there and she has to keep on. But in the country, she just bewitched everyone with her loveliness.

And the country lad has dreamed his dreams all the cold, long winter through and waited hopefully for the summer days to come, hoping almost against hope that she would come back again. For her he has watched and tended the flowers so that they would bloom in profusion when she returned. For her he has done everything within his power to make the place cool, in the hope that he can keep her here with him for a few days and nights.

But I wonder. To him she is a goddess and not knowing so out of his reach that he almost stops breathing when he thinks of her. To her, he is a country boy, and that is all.

But Dan's on to him, and perhaps the dream of the country boy will come true this time! Ever the same old hope, but isn't that what keeps us all going!

SUMMER! Lovely, dreamy, flowery Summer! And the country lad looks around at all the loveliness and wonders if the girl of his dreams will return! Last year she was here, dancing and flitting from place to place, a very vision of loveliness to him. And to her, he just fitted into the landscape of quiet calm and peace. For her it was a vacation from all the rush and artificiality of the big city, and she was happy to be just her own natural, lovely self. But in the city she would never do! Oh, dear, no! There's too much competition was what? . . . the 25th . . . the 23th of March . . .

Anniversary.

She very slightly smiled. "Well, one thing's certain; I'm not as busy as I am a year ago tonight." All turn, something of the anguish of that night recurring to her, she shook her head sharply, closed her eyes, propped her elbows on the dressing table so that her palms might press tight against her temples.

She remained thus, motionless, for a long time.

Her mind reached further back into last year, back to the day of her release from the hospital. Alan in his peculiar but some for her to see and had called Dr. . . . before and asked him to come and drive her home. They had talked scarcely at all on the way. Alan had been very dear, very solicitous and kind; but not talkative.

She had snuggled low in the seat beside him, rehearsing mentally, for the hundredth time, the things she would say . . . later . . . And later, in the living room of their bungalow on the roof (having invited him to "come on up and talk a little while"), she had said those things. But I'm not remember now what words she had spoken, what gestures employed. It was of no consequence. She remembered Alan's words, almost every one, and his eyes, and even his voice, quiet and even. "But what would be the use, Gay? The thing's quite hopeless. We could patch it up—but no lasting cure runs very far on a patch." That was the sort of thing he had said, so quietly. "You don't give a hang for me, honey. You never did. Davis is out of the picture now—but that doesn't really make any permanent difference, does it?

"He was out of it once before—and I didn't interest you. I wasn't even second fiddle. There were always other men you liked better—oh, I understand that now. I've had. I don't blame you it wasn't your fault. I simply failed to hold you, that was all. And now I think it's best for us both if I give up trying to hold you and—let you go."

Alan could have saved himself tears and healed with promises. Repeach she could have defeated by relevant self-reproach. "I'm all you say and more, and I'm so sorry." But against his calm finality, his quiet, sad resolve, she had no weapons. She tried them all; tears, pleadings, protestations. But none availed. It couldn't work, he said over and over. "It wouldn't ever work out." And once half-smiling, he said slowly, "You know, Gay, I hated your being dirty just as much as I hate your cruelty now that he's gone."

ing Monsieur de Vicomte to the risk of her discovery under his roof.

At this Monsieur de Corbal laughed with such evident amusement as to pique her a little, for she could not conceive in what she was ridiculous. But he did not leave her long in conjecture. He paced the chamber as he talked, upright and handsome, looking more like a nobleman and less like other things than usual.

Not only had he resumed today the ceremonious dress in which yesterday he had attended the Tribunal—he only saw in his kind in his wardrobe—but he had improved upon it. There was a foam of lace at his neck, and ruffles at his wrists to veil the hands which labor in the open had burnt brown; and he had brought out of their neglect a pair of lacquered shoes with paste buckles and red heels, shoes which in those days would have imperilled any man's neck.

He explained his laughter. "Mademoiselle, I am in the enviable position of a man for whom risks have ceased to exist, whom fear can no longer touch. This is Tuesday, and on Thursday next I am to die. That is why I laugh at the notion of danger to me from harboring you."

She swung her leg from the window-seat and sat bolt upright, confronting him, her eyes wide

"Monsieur! How is this possible? You amuse yourself at my expense. How can it be that you, who are free, . . ."

"I will explain," he interrupted her, and he did so.

She found it a tale in growing distress and also in growing admiration for his intrepid calm, for the almost humorous outlook with which he viewed his desperate situation. Again she was reminded of another whose outlook was ever humorous, too. But the difference!

"The beast!" she said, when he had done. "The cruel, mocking beast!"

The vicomte nodded. "That describes the end of him, I think. He is dead and misunderstood by almost tousy malign. Well, well! He may have my head. But he will not take me how it to his humorous will."

Her hands twisting and untwisting between her knees in her agitation of concern, she began to wish him to seek safety in flight.

He cut her short at the very outset.

"I thought of it, of course. But it would be useless, and there's a probability that I may be able to will not expose myself. I'll be no quarry for these Revolutionary dogs to hunt. If succumb I must, I'll succumb in dignity, as my blood demands. You agree. I hope, that the alternative is unthinkable; that every dead Corbal should shudder in his grave if I were guilty of any baseness to save my precious life?"

She pondered him in silence and an infinite compassion, an infinite tenderness. She was little addicted normally to seek the feminine relief of tears. Yet now it was only by an effort of will that she repressed them.

"Is there," she asked after a moment, "no third course possible? Have you thought well, monsieur?"

Perhaps more of her tender concern escaped in her voice than she intended. He halted before her, and his dark, solemn eyes considered her. The pallor deepened in his face as if he were suddenly beset by fear, and a deeper wistfulness crept into the lines of it. At last, very slowly, he answered her.

"Yes, I have thought. And a third course does offer. But . . ." He broke off with a little gesture of despair.

"But what, monsieur" Express it freely. It is the way to test a thought."

"You know that, too! How wise you are!" Admiration flashed in his eyes. "The thing, however, is not in need of the test or expression. I hesitate only from the fear of being misunderstood."

She almost smiled as she looked up at him. "To a man in your case can it matter to be misunderstood? Please let me know what is in your mind. For what does my opinion count in this?"

"For everything" he answered, and set her staring and a little trembling, stirred by a meaning quite indefinable.

He swung away from her abruptly, raised to the ceiling his head and back again, with bowed head, "come to a halt once more before her.

"I may be suspected of having found here no more than something to supply my need. That is my great fear. Will you believe . . . small . . . I have . . . not . . . I am a man in his last hours. There may be little good in me; but never is there a lack of honesty. I plead . . .

"That is how I should judge you, monsieur, Speak freely, then"

He spoke, but not freely. He faltered and stumbled awkwardly in a manner utterly unusual to him. Always interpreting promptly was pre-

"You will not see, mademoiselle, I beseech you, a lack of . . . of homage in what I am to say. In other circumstances . . . But here time presses. I am a man who has lived much alone. My books and my hand have been my only concerns, and my little family almost my only company in years. It . . . is a . . . from the world which has made . . . possible my survival until now. Many things that make up the life of my kind have passed me by. I have not . . . and . . . I have made . . . used them. No woman . . . I . . . to believe . . . no woman . . . ever touched my life. Until . . .

Madame Rose de Montauban still fiend. She was very white, and the gray woolen smock shuddered under the heave of her slight breasts. The vicomte paused there, watching her almost in fear, he who had contemplated death with such tranquillity. He clasped his hands in his nervousness and found them moist

"I . . . I have read the poets, of course, and I think I understand. But these things come to a man. I know . . . I am . . . I am going to make . . . Rose with me, mademoiselle, before I may seem to you outrageous. Doubt what you will, but not my truth and sincerity."

Again he paused. But still she said nothing. Of the two it would have been hard to say which was possessed by the deeper fear.

"When first I saw you there in the light last night, it seemed to me . . . as if my soul leapt from me to embrace your soul. I utter crudities, perhaps. I can express it in no other way. But so spontaneous, so . . . so inevitable was this thing, that it has seemed to me. . . . It is not a presumption, mademoiselle. It is an instinct, I think. It has seemed to me that something . . . soul, something mutual must have taken place. It seemed impossible that a man's spirit could . . . such silence so much . . . unsupported . . . Monsieur . . . I am ashamed at . . . I am humble. I . . . do not . . . I . . . Rose . . . Rose! Sabatini.

She interrupted him at last.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please inform me if it is in good form to use mourning paper, or may I use this paper? I am 18. Am I too young for mourning form? How long a period should I use it? May I still write letters to friends I know or would it be better to wait until after the mourning period?

M.

THE paper that you used to write to me is quite all right for you to use in writing letters now. Or plain white would be in every better taste. I do not advise you to use mourning paper. To begin with, mourning paper is not much used nowadays, and you are of an age where it would not seem necessary. Of course, write letters to your friends; the writing of letters during mourning depends only on one's feelings. And probably writing to your dear friends and having them write to you will be a very great solace.

Mourning now is usually very light, and often not at all. Of course, you would not wear startling colors, but neither is it necessary for you to wear black or black and white, unless you really wish to. The way one considers oneself and the way one feels in one's heart are the real evidences of the right attitude, rather than the clothes that one wears.

Go "some again," and do let me help if you think that I can. Will you?

While changing trains in Chicago, Delegate McShinglenail caused considerable annoyance at the City Hall by asking the Information Bureau attendant where to go to see a first-class murder.

New Film Planned by Mary Pickford

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

NEW YORK, June 22—Mary Pickford, with all her old-time sparkle and vivacity, discussed with me her plans for her next picture. Our discussion was necessarily limited since Mary and John Gray are only now working on an original story which is to be directed by Sam Taylor.

With Douglas Fairbanks starting work in four weeks, it is more than likely that Mary will be pretty well prepared for her own screen activities about that time.

Mary and Doug and Joseph Schenck left for Hollywood last night. I made an engagement with Mary to lunch at the Montmartre after the smoke of the Democratic convention has cleared away. That will be an occasion at Eddie Brandstander's famous cafe, for I do not remember having seen Mary at the Montmartre more than two or three times.

Doug is taking to the Coast with him Lawrence Irving, grandson of Sir Henry Irving, and Maurice Lejoir. The latter is a famous expert on ancient costumes, and his job will be to see that Doug remains in the period of "The Three Musketeers."

SCHOOL sometimes interferes with the movies Junior Coghlan, whose sensible parents insist that he have an education, is to be starred in "Marked Money," a Pathe thriller. But not so much as a crank can be turned until summer vacation and so the whole Pathe company is waiting for school to close to give Junior a chance to go to work.

Junior, who is one of the most delightful children I have ever met and who created such favorable comment in "Let 'Er Go Gallagher," will be the big noise in this serial. It is an airplane story from a kid's angle, an old fashioned thriller as he directed by Spencer Bennett, who made all the Pathe serials.

Negotiations are now on for Jacqueline Logan and George Duryea for the adult leaders. Hector Turnbull will supervise.

THEY tell great stories about Jean Hersholt in New York. His first glimpse of the Woolworth building, the Hudson, Wall st. and a few other landmarks was glimpsed when he arrived here with "The Girl From the Barge" company. He was simply agog over the big town and decided that New York was one of the few things in the world that was not over estimated.

Now Hersholt is returning to Manhattan with Betty O'Neill and other members of "The Girl From the Barge" company. They will finish the picture at the Paramount station here. This will only be a fore-runner of other pictures to be made there this coming year.

RAN into the United Artist offices to say au revoir to Joseph Schenck and who should I see but Douglas Fairbanks. Doug is about five pounds heavier and its becoming in spite of his protestations that he is getting portly. He is all eagerness to begin his picture and to get back to Hollywood. Joseph Schenck, by the by, is sailing July 4. He just walks right into California, it seems, and right out again.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

CONSIDER the Sheik, my Son.

He goeth softly, and the words of his mouth are fairer than a promise and sweeter than honey. Yea, they are tempered with plausibility and camouflaged with frankness and uttered with beautiful restraint.

• • •

His "line" varieth with each woman, and his method is never the same with two damsels. And of nicknames, he hath a select assortment.

• • •

The giraffe and the cuttlefish pronounceth "cute"; the rhyming the highbrow for her "sex-appeal"; but the flapper he praiseth for her wit and her sophistication.

• • •

He woweth to the beautiful dumbbell that it is her "spiritual companionship" which appealeth unto him; but the wallflower he calleth "dangerous."

• • •

He danceth with the triple-chinned dowager and calleth her "Kitty" though her name be Katherine—but he imploreth the wild and crazy damsel to be his "good influence."

• • •

Thus doth he offer unto every woman a brand new thrill! And each thinketh in her heart that she hath "IT"!

• • •

And lo, all his days are pleasantness and all his ways strewn with cut flowers and dinner invitations.

• • •

Matrons follow after him and confide in him their domestic sorrows, while they feed him from their husbands' tables and solace him with wine from their husbands' cellars.

• • •

Maidens hang upon his telephone and drive him about in their motor cars, hostesses make glad his weekends, and flappers supply him with kisses and amusement.

• • •

Give him the fruit of his labors, which are boredom and satiety and everlasting servitude. And, in the end, marriage to a stout widow with tiaras and diamonds, who washeth him as a combination groom, errand boy and lady's maid!

• • •

For verily, verily, no man can be at the same time a successful woman-tamer and his OWN master!

• • •

Yet have I beheld strong men who sought to combine shelking and business, and were filled with astonishment when they failed.

• • •

For woman-taming is an art and a lifestudy which requireth skill, diplomacy and eternal vigilance. And its rewards are but husks.

• • •

For when a sheik loseth his youth and his figure and his top-hair he loseth likewise his NERVE. And without nerve no gambler, no tumbler and no woman-tamer can survive!

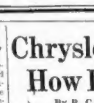
Chrysler Stock Gold Mine; How Detroit Reads Outlook

By B. C. FORBES

Detroit, June 22—Walter Chrysler is more discussed here at the moment than even Henry Ford, and is proclaimed an automobile wizard.



"Follow me and your dimonds." Is a common Wall Street saying. Those who have hooked up with Chrysler as a stockholders no even a modest scale have multiplied their money dazzlingly. General Motors has proved a veritable fountain of gold for its stockholders, but the Chrysler showing is even more phenomenal

If you had invested $1,000 in Chrysler stock in August, 1921, the market value of your shares by the beginning of this year would have reached $39,810! That is, you would have multiplied your investment 40 times. And meanwhile you would received in dividends $3375.

Detroit strongly favors the Chrysler-Dodge deal. Automotive men point out that when Walter Chrysler took over Maxwell, in 1921, the latter concern appeared to be in utterly hopeless shape. Mr. Chrysler has been able to do what he has done with Maxwell, which can be not do with Dodge with its wonderful force of dealers" they ask.

The progress of the Maxwell deal is being followed here with intense interest. Apparently everybody hopes it will go through—particularly Dodge stockholders who are familiar with the ins and outs of the motor industry.

The general expectation among motor men is that the second half of the year will compare favorably with the abound half of last year. Of course, the record-breaking production attained by various companies during recent months will not continue. The delay in speeding up the Ford output will mean a distinctly lower total production for the year than John J. Raskob and others originally estimated.

* * *

Although Ford is now employing a larger number of workers than ever before, his daily output of cars is only about one-third of what he attained with his Model T. Those in the industry are trying to figure out how many more Fords he will have to employ to get his new car up to the maximum. If he gets 85 each in 1915 and 1916, and 211 in 1913. Exira payments were made of 8 cents per share on common stock in 1915, 1916 and 1917.

Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, the famous American ace, who is now with Cadillac, is enthusiastic over the part flying will play in bringing about international understanding, friendliness and peace.

"Ten years ago," he said, "the airplane was thought of only as an instrument of destruction. On the western front we aviators hated each other. Today German and Irish fliers—former enemies—span the Atlantic in the same ship.

"We in the United States are now back into Germany thousands of congratulatory cablegrams, birthdays of goodwill. Lindbergh was the fortunate agent who first startled the world into a realization that the airplane is a product of science whose real mission is to promote mutual understanding and goodwill through transportation and communication.

"These peace-time scientific accomplishments with aircraft far surpass in lasting greatness the greatest achievements of aeronautics during the World War. Our greatest heroes today are not heroes of destruction but heroes of scientific development of all of our modern means of transportation and communication, for they enfold possibilities of world peace and progress far beyond even our most sanguine dreams."

A common sight on roads radiating from Detroit is lines of brand new cars being driven home by dealers from different parts of the country. Something new at least to me—was ten driving away of two new trucks on top of another new one, a three on one arrangement. They happened to be Federal motor trucks and when I mentioned the matter to President Martin L. Pulcher, he related a more novel incident.

A Virginian arrived in his passenger car, hoisted it on to his new truck, and started for home driving the truck. "This arrived in discomfort, he left in comfort," was the calm claim made by

* * *

The latest show place in Detroit is the stately Fisher Building now approaching completion, nearby the General Motors Building. In another city have so many dwelling houses been converted into offices. The finished Fisher office building will help remedy this.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Outlook Never Brighter

The Average Man Is the Index of National Culture, the Standard for Popular Criticism.

The average man, although he is only a figment in the brains of politicians, sociologists and economists and not an existing personality, is the theoretical datum round which the whole of American civilization revolves like the earth and moon falling round their mean center of gravity.

Toward his welfare the efforts of science, government and religion are primarily directed. As he thrives economically, morally and educationally, this country, presumably, rises in prosperity and contentment. He is the index of national culture, the standard for popular criticism, the ultimate consumer.

Also he is the voter who, when he exercises his privilege of the ballot, rules the nation.

The position of the average man in our social structure obviously must be somewhere in what is called the great middle class. He is that theoretical individual who is affected in some way — no matter how immeasurably — by every national development or disaster. He derives some benefit from a rise in the stock market, although he may not own a share of stock; his pocket suffers from a Mississippi flood, although he may live far from the devastated area.

Modern study of periods when the great wave of prosperity that has been sweeping over this country seems to hesitate as if it were going to break is resulting in sounder methods than the world has heretofore known for maintaining good wages and continued general employment.

Big Government, state, county and city projects should be pushed at times when employment shows a tendency to decrease. These furnish work to those who most need it and who are the first to suffer in economic depression. Such projects do not increase production that may already be more than ample.

But they do increase the buying power of the average man, and they achieve also great public advantages which make living in this twentieth century more worth while than living ever has been before in the history of the world.

We are entering upon a great era of public development. Hundreds of millions of dollars will be spent by governmental agencies during the next few years. Never was the outlook brighter for the average man.

Very Great Strength

But What of It?

FINE YOUNG MAN, AND PLEASING BURDEN.

This good looking, powerful young person is Seward Holley, a police officer of Venice, California, weighing 260 pounds. Training for a swimming marathon, he seems to find pleasant ways of gaining strength. He holds on his powerful neck and outstretched arms five pleasing young mermaids.

This will interest boys and girls, but let them not forget that mere strength, whether you hold up FIVE girls or FIVE THOUSAND girls, isn't of the slightest importance.

A rod of steel, smaller than one of the girls' little fingers, would hold this group and many others suspended indefinitely, perhaps for one hundred years, if you kept away rust.

All the muscles in this boy's well-developed legs and his outstretched arms amount to nothing in the modern world of mechanics and mechanical science. Once his muscle might have made him chief of a tribe. Now you become chief by thinking. ONE ORIGINAL IDEA IN THAT HANDSOME HEAD might work wonders.

Thomas A. Edison couldn't do this, but he could do something else, and he DID.

Marconi on his outstretched arms probably couldn't do more than hold up a couple of babies. But he invented wireless.

This young man, doubtless, will take a highly intellectual turn later, and we wish him success in that equal to his success in feats of strength.

Perhaps he will even develop an idea that will convince young ladies that in the great cosmic long run ideas are even more important than legs.

Samson, that Bible hero, was much more powerful than Policeman Holley, of Venice, California. With his thumb he could have crushed his false friend, Miss Delilah. But, while Samson used his muscles and allowed sentiment to carry him away, Delilah used her BRAINS. You remember what happened to Samson.

MODERN BUSINESS HAS NO FRONTIERS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE best thing that can happen to any virtue in the calendar is to have it demonstrated that it pays. It is much more effective help in the interest of laboring men to have the employer realize that eight hours pay better than ten, and six days in the week of labor pay better than seven, than it is to bombard this employer with altruistic speeches.

Only when the economic urge gets behind a moral idea is there much prospect of its getting over.

The greatest argument for religion in the world is that a religious man lives longer, has better health and is more efficient in every way than the irreligious one.

The best argument for prohibition is that drinkless people get a lot more work done than those who drink.

And now comes a group of financiers, English and American, who are forming a big trade body which ignores national boundaries. Its idea of a trust is not an American or English trust, but an international trust.

This is much better than issuing pamphlets showing the misery and cruelty of war or passing resolutions at Geneva or ministers' meeting about the insanity of war.

It is in the way of simply ignoring national boundaries. And why not? Business knows no frontiers. Nowadays trade is not satisfied with a less scope than the whole world, and when the business men of America begin to sit down in the same meeting with the business leaders of England, of France and of Germany it will do a lot more good than any League of Nations or than any resolution passed by any deliberating body.

Once show that war interferes with business and you have an argument that goes right home to men's business and bosoms.

Men are willing to dare and risk their lives a-plenty, but they are not so willing to risk their pocketbooks.

It is very refreshing to see that the pocketbook is lining up on the side of universal peace.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ELAINE'S a nice girl—
A bright girl—
A good and beautiful girl—
But she gets my goat.
Elaine is 37. She works in a library. She spends her days among fascinating books and interesting people. I like books and people—Elaine and I should get along fine. And we would—if she could forget her doggoned feelings.

About once a month Elaine and I have lunch together. In between times I forget about her feelings and only remember how pretty and sweet she is. By the time we meet I'm all pepped up for a cheerful hour. But, two minutes after we greet I could cry that dame with my bare, naked hands. For no sooner have we ordered the iced tea and chicken salad than Elaine begins to tell me about her feelings.

How she felt when Tom didn't ring up—
And when Mabel didn't write—
And when the cleaner spoiled her new taffeta dress—
And when she first doubted God—
Her feelings in general—
Her feelings when she was six, 10, 14, 18, 20, etc. Full, copious data given on each period.
Her feelings when she first realized her family didn't understand her—
Her fits of desperate brooding—
And the time she meditated suicide—
And the time she almost married a young man who was unworthy of her—
The way she simply thrills and thrills and THRILLS at beauty. If it wasn't for her family she'd be a Free Soul and live just like Isadora Duncan did.
And the way she shudders and shudders and SHUDDERS at ugliness—
N' how terrible life is for sensitive girls like her—
"N' her need of a great, kindred spirit, male preferred, but she'll take almost anything—
And on 'N' on 'N' ON—

Now if Elaine were really suffering I wouldn't mind her spoiling my lunch. If she had an ulcerated tooth, or a hopeless love or some bum oil stock or a mean boss or a moulting husband or any other of the Great Recognized Human Tragedies, I'd just bust my heart open trying to console her—but not a thing ails her. She eats like an ostrich and she has her family buffaloed and she's wearing a better looking spring hat than mine. But she just loves to wallow in her emotions. She's all gummed up with herself and it bores me to tears.

If there's one thing that isn't important to the universe after you've shed your pin feathers, it's your private, personal feelings. If after that period you still insist on concentrating on your own reactions, it's a pretty good sign that there's something wrong with you.

"This world is so full of a number of things" that the guy who can only be interested in himself must be missing on at least five cylinders.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

It is hardly possible to suspect another without having in one's self the seeds of baseness the party is accused of.—Stanislaus.

It is a great proof of talents to be able to recall the mind from the senses, and to separate thought from habit.—Cicero.

Human knowledge is the parent of doubt.—Ovenille.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 22—Thoughts while strolling: More towering "instep" buildings to add to the jagged skyline. Herb Roth, the caricaturist. An embarrassed youth carrying a corset form. Percy Hammond, a Cadiz, Ohio, boy, who made good in the city.

Giant Russian doormen who may be grand dukes or Siberian peasants. Street loafers who lean against buildings with a leering insolence. Ragged street genius who roam in packs and raid fruit stands. Cigarette vending machines that croak "Thank you."

Defeated old men working all day as dishwashers. And walking at night to Brooklyn hall rooms. An Indian medicine show three blocks from Times Square. N. T. G., the radio announcer and Broadway night owl. But a Jersey farmer in off hours.

Old men with blue caps and gray Brunigans from the river scows. Last year's ladies trying pathetically to be ever so roguish. Housewives who buy a quarter of a pound of butter, two eggs and a potato at a time. The moth-eaten tubbed trees in front of green-fronted Italian cafes.

One dollar down gold crowns. Radios until they hurt. Shoe shiners who seem always to be lunging in their doorways. A gaping crowd around a wounded bat. Listless children who drag spool boxes along the sidewalk.

The men with pushed-back hats and busy toothpicks who exchange banter with lunch counter girls. And forget a tip. A taxi driver scouring the neighborhood for change for a $20 bill. The old optimist. Wives who lean out windows and keep an eye on coatless husbands on the stoops.

Gene Buck's canary colored motor coat. The private house speak-easy with a gray-haired woman knitting in a front window. James Gleason, the actor. A street speaker's banner: "Boozo and Lose." Shoes named for movie stars. A pair of green lamps that adorn the home of an ex-mayor.

A telephone bureau that may prove a blessing to philanderings husbands or wives, although that is not ostensibly its purpose, has been opened. It prevents dumbing up mysterious calls at the family hearth. For a fee a customer may be listed and have his private calls received there. When a call comes in, he is notified promptly so and so wishes to speak to him. A patron may give his private bureau number only to those he wishes, or have it listed in the regular telephone directory.

THERE are more watches per person in New York than in any other city. All this despite the thousand and one street and building clocks all over town. Minutes are precious to New Yorkers, at least they have that idea. And while they use the clocks they want their own timepieces. Probably the most famous public clock stubs the Paramount building tower. The dials are twenty-five feet across, but the largest clock in midtown is the Metropolitan Tower which is twenty-six feet in diameter. The largest clock in the world in visible to dwellers on the lower tip of the island, but is across the river in Jersey. This is the famous Colgate timepiece and the dial is fifty feet in diameter. It is electrically lighted and at night detracts from the other electric wonders among those coming up the river on liners.

THE New Yorker who owns the greatest watch collection is an insurance executive who possesses 181, more than half of which are of the wrist variety. He was obsessed when a lad to own a gold hunting case watch and never achieved his ambition until after he was twenty-one. When wealth and affluence came he made up for his thwarted longings by buying the finest watches he could find from all parts of the world.

IT is about time to drag up a soap box and say a few words to traffic cops who bellow: "I gotta good mind to give you a ticket." My reply, in a thin scared voice, is that they should think up something snappier. There is no rule in the police code preventing originality.

Don't Be Peevish

Every Country Is "God's Country"

Sir Charles Higham, who is in the tea business, visiting the United States, discovers that it is "not God's own country any longer." He saw poverty here, restless people seeking pleasures, unemployment. He cannot understand why Americans call this "God's own country."

The learned Sir Charles should know that every nation considers its own land "God's own country." The Chinese call theirs "the Middle Kingdom," because they believe it is in the middle of the earth.

The Jews of ancient times considered their little country God's own country and considered themselves "God's chosen people." What they thought about themselves, and what some Americans think of themselves now, ALL savage peoples have thought.

And that's a good thing, adding dynamic energy to self-approval.

If we knew, as individuals and nations, how LITTLE we really amount to, progress would stop.

Perhaps there is no particular reason why it should NOT stop, but Providence has wound us up and we must go as we are wound.

England's Gold

She Has Lots of It

The great Bank of England, affectionately called "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," has the greatest gold accumulation in all its history. The bank added more than a million pounds gold the other day.

When Uncle Sam was piling up gold, John Bull warned us that it was DANGEROUS and UNHEALTHY, and we ought to get rid of it. But it's all right, presumably, when the gold lands in Threadneedle Street.
